Preface

The Textbook Society, Karnataka has been engaged in producing new textbooks according to the new syllabi which in turn are designed on NCF – 2005 since June 2010. Textbooks are prepared in 12 languages; seven of them serve as the media of instruction. From standard 1 to 4 there is the EVS, mathematics and 5th to 10th there are three core subjects namely mathematics, science and social science.

NCF – 2005 has a number of special features and they are:

- connecting knowledge to life activities
- learning to shift from rote methods
- enriching the curriculum beyond textbooks
- learning experiences for the construction of knowledge
- making examinations flexible and integrating them with classroom experiences
- caring concerns within the democratic policy of the country
- making education relevant to the present and future needs.
- softening the subject boundaries- integrated knowledge and the joy of learning.
- the child is the constructor of knowledge

The new books are produced based on three fundamental approaches namely;

Constructive approach, Spiral Approach and Integrated approach

The learner is encouraged to think, engage in activities, master skills and competencies. The materials presented in these books are integrated with values. The new books are not examination oriented in their nature. On the other hand they help the learner in the all round development of his/her personality, thus help him/her become a healthy member of a healthy society and a productive citizen of this great country, India.

The most important objectives of teaching language are listening, speaking, reading, writing and reference work. These skills have been given a lot of importance in all the language textbooks. Along with the inculcation of these skills, fundamental grammar, opportunities for learners to appreciate beauty and imbibe universal life values have been integrated in language textbooks. When learners master these competencies, they would stop studying textbooks for the sake of passing examinations.
In order to help learners master these competencies, a number of paired and group activities, assignments and project work have been included in the textbooks. It is expected that these activities would help learner master communicative skills. Ultimately, it is expected that students master the art of learning to learn and make use of these competencies in real life. Textbooks for students X have a special significance. As any other new textbook they help learners master skills and competencies and at the same time there is going to be a public examination based on them.

The Textbook Society expresses grateful thanks to the chairpersons, writers, scrutinisers, artists, staff of DIETs and CTEs and the members of the Editorial Board and printers in helping the Text Book Society in producing these textbooks. A few works of some writers and poets have been included in these textbooks. The textbook society is extremely grateful to them for giving their consent for the inclusion of these pieces in the textbooks.

A Note for the Facilitator

The 10th Standard English Second Language Text is conceived and written broadly on the principles laid down in the National Curriculum Framework (NCF-2005), as also on the guidelines spelt out in many documents of Karnataka Text Book Committee(R).

The objective of the text is to provide ample scope to use English, mainly as a medium of communication, as a means of acquiring skills and competencies, and also to motivate the learner to use it as a spring board for aesthetic appreciation and creativity.

The committee, while preparing the text, was largely guided by the principles, approaches and techniques highlighted in NCF-2005; principles of learning how to learn, issue based learning and Critical Pedagogy; Constructivist, Integrated and Spiral Approaches; learner-centred techniques focusing on interaction of the learner with the teacher, with the peer, with the material, and with the world outside, all culminating in constructing or building up knowledge.

The content of each unit is chosen keeping in view its relevance, the interest it sustains and the value it imbibes in the reader as also its potentiality to generate language study. Each unit has a poem, the theme of which is similar to that of the prose text in it. Poems are intended to be read and appreciated more for their rhythm or music, imagery and unique expression, than for their content or summary.

The themes selected for prose have a wide range of values including compassion, the smell of the soil, fortitude, talent overriding all superficial borders, traits of real leadership, genius transgressing all disabilities, genial humour and critical thinking.

The supplementary section of the reader is meant for extensive reading. The objective is to promote love for reading through exposure to a variety of texts. Each unit of the book has been structured with a definite purpose.

Before you read is intended to provide a right premise for motivating the learner about the theme of the text. Teacher can think and design additional activities suited to the learners.

Check your understanding and Share your responses section has some easy, factual questions. Students read that part of the text silently, read the questions, go back to the text and form some responses. Then in pairs, they are encouraged to exchange their responses. Teacher goes round the class and provides required help or support.

Think about the text aims at consolidating whatever knowledge they have acquired over the previous activity. Now, it is time for the teacher to treat the class as a unit, and encourage the learners to discuss and present orally. The next step is to make them write the answers for the questions.

Enrich your vocabulary section is supposed to be dealt with the help of the copies of dictionary to be provided in the class. Teacher may write a few of the words on the blackboard and guide the learners to use them in meaningful contexts.

Listen and respond precede all other activities. Learners close the book, listen to the teacher and then respond. In some cases, teacher may have to read more than once, before the students make effort to respond.
Speak well intends to promote the skill of speaking. Learners may be advised to take roles and say the dialogues, preferably without looking at the book. They will do this with appropriate body language, facial expression and eye-contact.

Read and respond is an attempt to extend and enrich such skills as skimming, scanning, inferring and interpreting, discussing, based on the given text as well as visuals like maps, charts, tables etc.,

Practise writing encourages learners to improve the skills of collecting data, organizing them in an order, making drafts, editing them and finally coming up with a piece of writing. The learners have got to be guided throughout as this is the most exacting of all the skills.

Learn grammar through communication as the very title suggests is done with meaningful and interesting activities. Whatever rules the learners are supposed to know, ought to be driven home based on meaning oriented tasks and exercises. Students are encouraged to come out with the lexical and syntactic system only after sufficient practice.

Make reference is a section which seeks to guide the learners to choose the required source of information. Since material support is as crucial as manual one, activities are suggested to improve the skills of making appropriate reference.

Do the project is intended to get the learners involved in the process of learning. Such aspects as time, management and material support can be thought of well in advance. The steps listed above are suggestive, not prescriptive. Teachers do well to add, or modify, and enrich their strategies depending on the level of learners, of course without going against the accepted principles of learning.

A word about evaluation, a caution, is not out of place here. The principle of constructivism emphasizes that learning and evaluation – rather than saying teaching and testing- go hand in hand. So, any attempt, willy-nilly to revert to the three hour, one-shot examination will strike at the very root of the intended objectives spelt out in NCF-2005 and will also nullify all the efforts made throughout the year by the facilitators.

The committee thanks the Director for the help and assistance, owes gratitude to Dr.G.S.Mudambadithaya, Co-ordinator for his guidance. Also we are indebted to the staff of the directorate for their co-operation.

Wishing all the stakeholders of the text an enjoyable and rewarding experience.

On behalf of the committee.

About the Revision of Textbooks

Honourable Chief Minister Sri Siddaramaiah who is also the Finance Minister of Karnataka, in his response to the public opinion about the new textbooks from standard I to X, announced, in his 2014-15 budget speech of constituting an expert-committee, to look into the matter. He also spoke of the basic expectations there in, which the textbook experts should follow: “The textbooks should aim at inculcating social equality, moral values, development of personality, scientific temper, critical acumen, secularism and the sense of national commitment”, he said.

Later, for the revision of the textbooks from class I to X, the Department of Education constituted twenty seven committees and passed an order on 24-11-2014. The committees so constituted were subject and class-wise and were in accordance with the standards prescribed. Teachers who are experts in matters of subjects and syllabi were in the committees.

There were already many complaints and analyses about the textbooks. So, a freehand was given in the order dated 24-11-2014 to the responsible committees to examine and review text and even to prepare new text and revise if necessary. Eventually, a new order was passed on 19-9-2015 which also gave freedom even to re-write the textbooks if necessary. In the same order, it was said that the completely revised textbooks could be put to force from 2017-18 instead of 2016-17.

Many self inspired individuals and institutions, listing out the wrong information and mistakes there in the text, had sent them to the Education Minister and to the Textbook Society. They were rectified. Before rectification we had exchanged ideas by arranging debates.
Discussions had taken place with Primary and Secondary Education Teachers’ Associations. Questionnaires were administered among teachers to pool up opinions. Separate meetings were held with teachers, subject inspectors and DIET Principals. Analytical opinions had been collected. To the subject experts of science, social science, mathematics and languages, textbooks were sent in advance and later meetings were held for discussions. Women associations and science related organisations were also invited for discussions. Thus, on the basis of inputs received from various sources, the textbooks have been revised where ever necessary.

Another important aspect has to be shared here. We constituted three expert committees. They were constituted to make suggestions after making a comparative study of the texts of science, mathematics and social science subjects of central schools (NCERT), along with state textbooks. Thus, the state text books have been enriched based on the comparative analysis and suggestions made by the experts. The state textbooks have been guarded not to go lower in standards than the textbooks of central schools. Besides, these textbooks have been examined along side with the textbooks of Andhra Pradesh, Kerala, Tamil Nadu and Maharashtra states.

Another clarification has to be given here. Whatever we have done in the committees is only revision, it is not the total preparation of the textbooks. Therefore, the structure of the already prepared textbooks have in no way been affected or distorted. They have only been revised in the background of gender equality, regional representation, national integrity, equality and social harmony. While doing so, the curriculum frames of both central and state have not been transgressed. Besides, the aspirations of the constitution are incorporated carefully. Further, the reviews of the committees were once given to higher expert committees for examination and their opinions have been inculcated into the textbooks.

Finally, we express our grateful thanks to those who strived in all those 27 committees with complete dedication and also to those who served in higher committees. At the same time, we thank all the supervising officers of the Textbook Society, who sincerely worked hard in forming the committees and managed to see the task reach its logical completion. We thank all the members of the staff who co-operated in this venture. Our thanks are also to the subject experts and to the associations who gave valuable suggestions.

Supplementary Reading

1. Narayanpur Incident
2. On Top of the World
3. A Great Martyr ever Cherished
4. The Bird of Happiness
Before you read

Read this anecdote narrated by a person. Then answer the question given below.

I was teaching my eight year old son Siddhartha about living and non-living things. I then asked him to tell me five important features of living things. He promptly told me that living things breathe, feel, move and grow old and die.

“One more?” I said and it looked like he couldn’t remember. “forget,” he finally added. I smiled.

Questions

Can you guess why ‘I’ smiled? At his ignorance / forgetfulness in general/ ready wit? [Choose the most appropriate one]

Now read the following story to know how a child became a hero overnight.
1. For Swami, events took an unexpected turn. Father looked over the newspaper he was reading under the hall lamp and said, “Swami, listen to this: News has been received about the bravery of a village lad who, while returning home by the jungle path, came face to face with a tiger……..”

The paragraph described the fight the boy had with the tiger and his flight up the tree where he stayed half a day till some people came that way and killed the tiger.

2. After reading it through, father looked at Swami fixedly and asked, “What do you say to that?”

Swami said, “I think he must have been a very strong and grown-up person, not a boy at all.” “How could a boy fight a tiger?”

“You think you are wiser than the newspaper?” father sneered. “A man may have the strength of an elephant and yet be a coward: where as another may have the strength of a straw, but if he has courage, he can do anything. Courage is everything, strength and age are not important”.

Swami disputed the theory. “How can it be, Father? Suppose I have all the courage what could I do if a tiger should attack me?”

“Leave alone strength, can you prove you have courage? Let me see if you can sleep alone tonight in my office room.”

sneer : speak in a very unkind way, fearful : unpleasant, face to face with : close to something and looking at it, reading it through : reading it from the beginning to the end, crossly : a little angrily, mere skeleton : very thin, scowl : an angry look or expression.
3. A frightful proposition, Swami thought. He had always slept beside his granny in the passage, and any change in this arrangement kept him trembling and awake all night. He hoped at first that father was only joking. He mumbled weakly, “Yes,” and tried to change the subject: he said very loudly and with a great deal of enthusiasm, “We are going to admit even elders in our cricket club hereafter. We are buying brand-new bats and balls. Our captain has asked me to tell you...”

4. “We’ll see about that later,” father cut in. “You must sleep alone hereafter.” Swami realized that the matter had gone beyond his control: from a challenge it had become a command; he knew his father’s tenacity at such moments.

5. “From the first of next month, I’ll sleep alone, Father.”
   “No, you must do it now. It is disgraceful sleeping beside granny or mother like a baby. You are in the second form and I don’t like the way you are being brought up,” he said and looked at his wife, who was rocking the cradle. “Why do you look at me while you say it?” she asked. “I hardly know anything about the boy.”
   “No, no, I don’t mean you,” said father.
   “If you mean your mother is spoiling him, tell her so; and don’t look at me,” she said and turned away.

1. Swami’s father drew his attention to a report in the newspaper. What was the report about?

2. The report said that the boy (who fought with the tiger) stayed on the tree for half-a-day. Why did he do so? (Choose the right answer)
   a. He wanted to watch the tiger from the top of a tree.
   b. He wanted someone to kill the tiger.
   c. He wanted to take rest for some time.

tenacity: determination, cut in: interrupted at once.
proposition: suggestion, mumble: say something not clearly enough.
Second form: Seventh standard during British times.
3. Swami said that a very strong and grown-up person might have fought with the tiger. Do you think he made this remark out of his (a) experience (b) wisdom (c) belief? (Choose the most appropriate word)

4. “Can you prove you have courage?” Swami’s father said. (Answer the following questions)
   a. Was he joking? Or, serious?
   b. Was it a challenge? Or, a command?

5. The place where Swami usually slept was...........................(Fill in the blank)

6. What is disgraceful, according to Swami’s father?

6. Swami’s father sat gloomily gazing at the newspaper on his lap. Swami rose silently and tiptoed to his bed in the passage; granny was sitting up in her bed, and remarked, “Boy, are you already feeling sleepy? Don’t you want to hear a story?” Swami made wild gesticulations to silence his granny, but that good lady saw nothing. So Swami threw himself on his bed and pulled the blanket over his face.

7. Granny said, “Don’t cover your face. Are you really very sleepy?” Swami leant over and whispered, “Please, please, shut up granny. Don’t talk to me, and don’t let anyone call me even if the house is on fire. If I don’t sleep at once, perhaps I shall die.” He turned over and curled, and snored under the blanket till he found his blanket pulled away.

8. Presently his father came and stood over him. “Swami, get up,” he said. He looked like an apparition in the semi-darkness of the passage, which was lit by a cone of light from the hall. Swami stirred and groaned as if in sleep. Father said, “Get up, Swami.” Granny pleaded, “Why do you disturb him?”

9. “Get up, Swami,” said father for the third time and Swami got up.

gloomily: feeling in a way that things will not improve, sternly: seriously and strictly, tiptoed: walked quietly on the tips of his toes, gesticulations: to make movements with hands and arms, snore: to breathe in a noisy way, apparition: ghost.
Father rolled up his bed, took it under his arm and said, “Come with me.” Swami looked at granny, hesitated for a moment, and followed his father into the office room. On the way he threw a look of appeal at his mother and she said, “Why do you take him to the office room? He can sleep in the hall, I think.”

“I don’t think so,” father said, and Swami slunk behind him with bowed head.

“Let me sleep in the hall, Father,” Swami pleaded. “Your office room is very dusty and there may be scorpions behind your law books.”

“There are no scorpions, little fellow. Sleep on the bench if you like.”

“Can I have a lamp burning in the room?”

“No. You must learn not to be afraid of darkness. It is only a question of habit. You must cultivate good habits.”

“Will you at least leave the door open?”

“All right. But promise you won’t roll up your bed and go to your granny’s side at night. If you do it, I’ll make you the laughing stock of your school.”

   b. Was it a trick to escape from his father? (Answer all the questions.)

10. Swami felt cut off from humanity. He was pained and angry. He did not like the strain of cruelty he saw in his father’s nature. He hated the newspaper for printing the tiger’s story. He wished that the tiger had not spared the boy, who didn’t appear to be a boy after all, but a monster……..

11. As the night advanced and the silence in the house deepened, his heart beat faster. He remembered all the stories of devils and ghosts he had heard in his life. How often his chum Mani had seen the devil in the banyan tree at his street end. And what about poor Munisami’s father, who spat out blood because the devil near the river’s edge slapped his cheek when he was returning home late one night. And so on and on his thoughts continued. He was faint with fear. A ray of light from the street lamp strayed in and cast shadows on the wall. Through the stillness all kinds of noises reached his ears—the ticking of the clock, rustle of trees, snoring sounds, and some vague night insects humming. He covered himself so completely that he could hardly breathe. Every moment he expected the devils to come up to carry him away; there was the instance of his old friend in the fourth class who suddenly disappeared and was said to have been carried off by a ghost to Siam or Nepal…..

12. Swami hurriedly got up and spread his bed under the bench and crouched there. It seemed to be a much safer place, more compact and reassuring. He shut his eyes tight and encased himself in his blanket once again and unknown to himself fell asleep, and in sleep was racked

with nightmares. A tiger was chasing him. His feet stuck to the ground. He desperately tried to escape but his feet would not move; the tiger was at his back, and he could hear its claws scratch the ground.... scratch, scratch, and then a loud thud...... Swami tried to open his eyes but his eyelids would not open and the nightmare continued. It threatened to continue forever. Swami groaned in despair.

13. With a desperate effort he opened his eyes. He put his hand out to feel his granny's presence at his side as was his habit, but he only touched the wooden leg of the bench. And his lonely state came back to him. He sweated with fright. And now what was this rustling? He moved to the edge of the bench and stared into the darkness. Something was moving down. He lay gazing at it in horror. His end had come. He realized that the devil would presently pull him out and tear him, and so why should he wait? As it came nearer he crawled out from under the bench, hugged it with all his might, and used his teeth on it like a mortal weapon....

14. “Aiyo! Something has bitten me,” went forth an agonized, thundering cry and was followed by a heavy tumbling and falling amidst furniture. In a moment father, cook, and a servant came in, carrying light.

And all three of them fell on the burglar who lay amidst the furniture with a bleeding ankle.

15. Congratulations were showered on Swami next day. His classmates looked at him with respect, and his teacher patted his back. The headmaster said that he was a true scout. Swami had bitten into the flesh of one of the most notorious house-breakers of the district and the police were grateful to him for it.

16. The inspector said, “Why don’t you join the police when you are grown up?”

Swami said for the sake of politeness, “Certainly, yes,” though he had quite made up his mind to be an engine driver, a railway guard, or a bus conductor later in life.

17. When he returned home from the club that night, father asked, “Where is the boy?”

“He is asleep.”

“Already!”

“He didn’t have a wink of sleep the whole of last night,” said his mother.

“Where is he sleeping?”

“In his usual place,” mother said casually. “He went to bed at seven-thirty.”

“Sleeping beside his granny again!” father said. “No wonder he wanted to be asleep before I could return home. Clever boy!”

clutched: held tightly, tumbling: falling helplessly, burglar: a person who enters a building in order to steal (house breaker), scout: one who is trained in doing acts of public service, not have a wink of sleep: couldn’t sleep, notorious: evil-minded.
Mother lost her temper. “You let him sleep where he likes. You needn’t risk his life again.” Father mumbled as he went in to change, “All right, molly-coddle and spoil him as much as you like. Only don’t blame me afterwards.”

Swami, following the whole conversation from under the blanket, felt tremendously relieved to hear that his father was giving him up.

Task - 1: Look at these (partial) dictionary entries.

lorry n BrE : a large motor vehicle for carrying heavy goods.

truck n 1. BrE : an open railway vehicle for carrying goods.  2. AmE a large motor vehicle:
BrE lorry 3. A simple vehicle for carrying goods which is pushed or pulled by hand.
These entries tell us that a. lorry is a word in British English. (This is indicated by BrE; some dictionaries say ‘Brit’ instead.)

b. truck in British English means an open railway vehicle, not a motor vehicle.

c. In American English (‘AmE’ or, in some dictionaries, ‘US’), truck means a motor vehicle – the same as lorry.

d. truck can also mean a simple vehicle pushed or pulled by hand, that is, a hand pulled (or hand-pushed) cart, in both British and American English.

Although British English and American English are largely the same, there are some differences between them in the spelling, pronunciation and meanings of words. Dictionaries give us information on these differences.

Task - 2: Now look at the following dictionary entry.

windbag n infml derog. A person who talks too much and bores people.

What does ‘derog’ here mean? It means that the word windbag is derogatory, that is, a person will feel insulted if he/she is called a ‘windbag’. Certain words in every language are derogatory and it is useful to know about them in order to avoid causing offence without intending so.

Task - 3: With the help of a dictionary, find out what you can understand about the following words:

1. cheque and check as nouns.
2. hire and rent as verbs.

Grandma Climbs a Tree

-Ruskin Bond
Read the poem

My grandmother was a genius. You’d like to know why?
Because she could climb trees. Spreading or high,
She’d be up their branches in a trice, and mind you
When last she climbed a tree she was sixty-two.
Ever since childhood, she’d had this gift
For being happier in a tree than in a lift;
And though, as years went by, she would be told
That climbing trees should stop when one grew old-
And that growing old should be gone about gracefully-
She’d laugh and say, ‘Well I’ll grow disgracefully,
I can do it better’. And we had to agree;
For in all the garden there wasn’t a tree
She hadn’t been up, at one time or another [Having learned to climb from a loving brother when she was six] but it was feared by all
That one day she’d have a terrible fall.
The outcome was different-while we were in town
She climbed a tree and couldn’t come down.
After the rescue,
The doctor took Granny’s temperature and said,
‘I strongly recommend a quiet week in bed’.
We sighed with relief and tucked her up well.
Poor Granny! For her, it was like a brief season in hell.
Confined to her bedroom, while every breeze
Whispered of summer and dancing leaves.
But she had held her peace till she felt stronger.
Then she sat up and said, ‘I’ll lie here no longer!’
And she called for my father and told him undaunted
That a house in a treetop was what she now wanted.
My dad knew his duties. He said, That’s all right-You’ll have what you want, dear. I’ll start work tonight.’

in a trice: very quickly, outcome: what actually happened; hold one’s peace: keep quiet, undaunted: without hesitation.
With my expert assistance, he soon finished the chore:
Made her a tree-house with windows and a door.
So granny moved up, and now every day
I climb to her room with glasses and tray.
She sits there in state and drinks sherry with me.
Upholding her right to reside in a tree.

Understand the poem

1. The speaker in the poem does not call his grandmother ‘childish’. What else was she according to him? Why does he consider her to be so? {lines 1-4}
2. Grandma had been in the habit of climbing trees for a very long period. Identify the lines that suggest this.
3. Look at the lines 7 and 8. ‘She would be told . . . . . . .’ Who do you think would tell her so?
4. Do you find anything odd in the reply given by the grandma? If so, why do you think it is odd? {lines 10-11}
5. Others had feared that granny would fall from a tree one day or the other. Did this happen? Or did something else happen? {lines 15-18}
6. What had the doctor recommended? What was the reaction of the kids to this advice?
7. Quote the lines which suggest how wholeheartedly granny enjoyed climbing a tree.
8. ‘My dad knew his duties’. What did he think his duty was?
9. Look at the picture given below the title. Quote the lines that might have guided the artist to draw that.

Read and appreciate

A. 1. Read the poem again. Does the behaviour of grandma strike you as unusual? If so, support your view quoting her ways and responses to others. One is done for you.
   - Grandma climbing a tree. (way 1)
   - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - (response)
   - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - (response)

chore : task, sherry : yellow or brown coloured wine, upholding : making clear to the world.
2. ‘Growing old gracefully’ is an expression used in the poem. Discuss with your partner whether what the grandma was doing was graceful or otherwise.

3. Both the narrator (speaker in the poem) and his father were very considerate towards Grandma. Substantiate the statement with textual support.

4. If you were to divide the entire poem into two parts, which line would you pick up to be the beginning of the second part? Why?

B. 1. Have a close look at the rhyme-scheme. Write at least 5 pairs of the rhyming words. e.g. said - bed.

2. “It was like a brief season”. Name the figure of speech in the sentence. What are the two things compared? Explain.

3. ‘For being happier in a tree than in a lift’. What is suggested through this line? Exchange your views with your partner.

4. ‘There was not a tree, she hadn’t been up’ is an expression.

   Rewrite the above sentence without using ‘not’ (note : the meaning should be the same).

   Give some more examples from outside the text to illustrate the effective use of double negatives.

C. Read the line ‘she would be up in the branches in a trice.’

   What picture do you get in your mind when you read this? May be it is the picture of grandma climbing a tree deftly even like a monkey.

   Now read the following lines and say what pictures or images that come to your mind.

   Try to draw these pictures if you can:

   1. An aged woman confined to bed.
   2. Every breeze whispered of summer and dancing leaves.
   3. Being happier in a tree than in a lift.
   4. I will grow disgracefully.

Who, Me?

- Joyce Armor

There is a kid who lives with us
Who no one’s ever seen.
He’s the guy who broke our vase
And painted Fluffy green.

He drew the funny pictures
On my brother’s bedroom door,
And left those worms to shrivel up
Inside my dresser drawer.
He also took my favorite cookies
From the cookie jar,
And put a tuna sandwich
In the brand new VCR.

In fact, he does most everything
That you might think is bad.
Of course he isn’t really real . . .
Just don’t tell Mom and Dad.

-Deven Kanal

Nobody dared to go where this youngster did...

1. As the Mumbai suburban electric train made its 20-second, 6:32 p.m. halt at a station, commuters swarmed out and into its 12 packed coaches. It’s a regular scene in and around India’s most populated metropolis. Having just managed to squeeze herself into a ladies’ compartment, 21-year-old call centre executive Roma Talreja tried to settle into a corner near the door. The train hurtled ahead and Roma, jammed between other women, was trying to find some space to stand safely on when she suddenly got pushed, lost her tenuous foothold and panicked.

2. Her hands reached for the steel railing above, but finding only air, Roma was thrown out of the coach. The clattering roar of the train muffled the thud of her fall on to the ground more than a metre below. She was knocked senseless.

3. Standing near the door of another train speeding in the opposite direction, 20-year-old Baleshwar Mishra couldn’t believe what he had just seen - a young woman in a black salwar-kameez lying next to the tracks. Meanwhile, gasps and screams emanated from his compartment. “There’s a girl by the tracks!” the voices cried out.

4. Impulsively, Baleshwar went and grabbed the train’s red emergency chain and pulled it down frantically. The train screeched, slowing down. He then surveyed the compartment full of wary faces. “Let’s go and help her!” he shouted. But nobody volunteered, afraid of getting involved, of being inconvenienced perhaps.

5. His heart hammering his chest, Baleshwar shoved himself to the door, and jumped off the still-moving train. As he landed on the ground, a burst of pain shot up in his ankle. But there was no real damage. He got up to find part of his old rubber slipper’s sole torn off as a result of his fall. But Baleshwar started to sprint back between the tracks as his train picked up speed again and disappeared.

Check your understanding

1. “It’s a regular scene.” What was regular about the scene? (para – 1)
2. “Roma Talreja tried to settle into a corner near the door in the train.”
   Was she right in doing this? What would you have done if you were there?
3. “There’s a girl by the tracks,” the voices cried out.
   Whose voices do you think those were?
4. Baleshwar was impulsive in taking a decision because…………………………
   (Fill in the blank appropriately.) (para – 3)
5. The dictionary says ‘callous’ means ‘unconcerned’.
   In this situation, who do you think were ‘callous’ towards the accident?
6. ‘Baleshwar rushed to help the girl.’ His movement has been described with verbs like ‘shoved’. Identify two more such verbs/verbal phrases in paragraph (5).

Read on

6. Baleshwar was so far away from Roma, he couldn’t see her. “I hope I’m not too late,” he thought, gasping for breath. After running for several minutes, he found her sprawled by the side of the tracks. “Behenji, aap theek hai?” he asked [Sister, are you okay?]. But there was no response, and no help in sight. They were alone somewhere between two stations five kilometers apart in Thane district, which borders Mumbai.

7. Baleshwar could see blood flowing out of a gash behind the young

woman’s head. Saying a silent prayer, he lifted the five-foot-two, 50-kilo Roma gingerly and made his way across the tracks, looking out for trains and searching for a way out. He crossed through some shrubbery, and followed the direction of the sounds until he found the road. “My sister is injured,” he implored motorists who drove by. “Please help me take her to a hospital.” But no one stopped.

8. That morning on December 10, 2010, a Friday, Roma Talreja arrived at the call centre bright and early. The B.Com graduate from Pune had been working there for two years, loving her job, talking and connecting to customers, and making new friends there. After work she went to the cafeteria, where she and her friends joked, laughed and made plans for the weekend. Then, heading home alone after her shift, Roma was looking forward to having supper with her parents and brother, and a long phone chat with her fiancé Vijay.

9. Baleshwar Mishra has a very different story. The lanky youngster from Mirzapur, UP, is an unemployed high-school dropout who’d recently come to Mumbai. Living with his two older brothers, his job hunt had proved fruitless. Now he was treading water, and had resigned himself to the fact that he was running out of options. He had spent his day with a friend, grabbed lunch and watched a movie. As Baleshwar boarded the train home, he pondered over his future. But, all he could now think of was saving a stranger’s life.

10. Innumerable motorists drove by, some even slowing down to see the young man struggling to hold the blood-covered woman in his arms. Just when he had begun to lose hope, a tempo-truck pulled over and its driver, a middle-aged man who spoke Gujarati, stepped out.

11. “Help me,” Baleshwar pleaded, and the man helped Baleshwar lay Roma down in the back of his truck. Baleshwar was quickly telling the driver what had happened when a traffic policeman arrived. “Take the girl to Airoli,” suggested the cop, “there’s a hospital there.” But Baleshwar disagreed. Airoli was at least 10 kilometres away.

12. “There’s a closer place I know of,” said Baleshwar. Ten minutes later, they arrived at a small hospital where nurses helped take the young woman in. But as the facility lacked personnel and equipment, the on-duty physician wasn’t able to do more than give basic first aid. He advised that she be moved to a nearby hospital.

13. Baleshwar and the driver had no choice but to move her back into the truck. When the vehicle lurched forward, Roma stirred and her eyes fluttered open.

“What’s your name?” asked Baleshwar, who was with her in the back of the truck.

personnel: staff, lurched: moved unsteadily, fluttered: opened slightly.
“Roma,” she managed to grind out.

“Whom can I call?” he asked quickly, fearing that she would black out once more.

“My brother Dinesh,” she said, slowly giving him Dinesh’s cell phone number. Baleshwar memorized it and watched as Roma’s eyes soon lost focus and rolled back into the darkness.

14. “Chacha, can I borrow your mobile?” Baleshwar asked, and the driver passed him his phone.

Dinesh Talreja was wrapping up his day at his marketing job at a retail outlet in Ulhasnagar when his phone rang from a number he didn’t recognize.

“Dineshbhai?” a young voice asked. “Your sister Roma has fallen off a train and we’re taking her to Divine Hospital in Ghansoli.”

“I’m on my way,” said Dinesh, rushing towards his motorcycle.

15. Roma arrived at Divine Multi-Speciality Hospital and Research Centre minutes later. Dr Anil Agarwal, the medical director there, seeing the extent of Roma’s injuries, admitted her immediately to the ICU without any paperwork.

16. He asked Baleshwar to hang around until Roma’s family arrived. That was when they noticed that the driver, having done all he could, had slipped away with his truck. “Oh, I couldn’t thank him,” Baleshwar thought.

17. Roma was still unconscious. But her X-rays showed that although the injuries looked severe, all she needed were deep wound sutures. There would be no lasting damage, but Dr. Agarwal believes she could have bled to death had nobody helped her. When she finally opened her eyes that night, her brother and fiancé were by her side. She could barely speak, just nodded and fell asleep again.

18. When Baleshwar came to meet her the next morning, Roma was still partly sedated. On his way, Baleshwar had even revisited the spot where Roma had fallen, looking for her belongings because Dinesh had told him that her cell phone and handbag were missing. Not far from the spot, a railway employee assured Baleshwar that some of Roma’s belongings had been found.

20. In a few days, Roma made a full recovery. “I can’t imagine what would have happened if Baleshwar hadn’t been there,” she says, amazed to learn of the manner in which she had been rescued.

“I think it’s astonishing that a stranger would jump off a train and risk his life for me. I can never repay Baleshwar.”

“I’m new to Mumbai, but I’ve noticed that people here are afraid,” says Baleshwar, who is still looking for a job. “They fear getting trapped in the courts or with the police.”

So why did he do it? “She needed help,” Baleshwar puts it simply. “That day it was Roma. Tomorrow it could be you or me by the tracks, bleeding and alone.”

hang around: wait, suture: a stitch that is used to sew a wound together, barely speak: not able to speak, partly sedated: half awake due to drugs.

Do you know why Bombay was renamed Mumbai?

In the Marati language, Bombay has been referred to as Mumbai for more than 200 years. But it has not always been so. Mumbai has an ancient temple dedicated to Mumbadevi. The real name of this deity was Maha Amba Devi or Maha Amba Ayi (Mother). The word, Maha Amba Ayi, got corrupted to become Maha Ambayi, then to Mambayi and finally to Mumbai. According to Murray’s Handbook, the name is possibly derived from Mumba Bai, the word used by the local kolis for the goddess. The Portuguese think the word ‘Bombay; is derived from the Portuguese words – Bom Bahia or Fair Bay.

You know that the names of some states and cities have been changed in India. Collect information about at least two cities and find out the reasons for such changes in their names.

Quality of Mercy
(for memorization)
- William Shakespeare

Read the text

The quality of mercy is not strain’d;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blest:
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes.
’Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown.
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway;
It is enthroned in the heart of kings;
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God’s
When mercy seasons justice.

I Feel Your Pain

- Christine Rigden

I feel your pain
and long to touch the hurt and make it melt away.

Yes, I know that I can’t really see the breadth and depth of this dark valley you’re in.

I can’t truly know just how sharp the knife is in your soul,
For it is you in its path, not me.

But I have known other valleys and in my heart still bear knife wound scars.

Even so,
I would walk your road and take your pain if I could.

I cannot,
And yet, perhaps
In some way
I can be a hand to hold in the darkness.

In some way, try to blunt
the sharpness of pain.
but if not, it may help a little,
just to know I care.

Compassion

- Bernard Howe

What makes us feel so nice, and everything feels so right?
Remember when we get some praise,
and it fills us with delight.
When someone showers us with love or treats us gentle and kind.
To the troubles of our daily life
this will often make us blind.
If everyone would show more kindness and practise it every day. There is no telling what would happen if we would be careful of what we say.

A smile will go a long way towards, making someone feel at ease. Another simple little thing is to always use the word please.

And Thank you is another word that lets people know you care. Every little deed like these does not go unaware.

Let’s try to make the world a better place to live within. Those who show love for one another usually don’t live with any sin.

The poet asks us to practise kindness and make this world a better place to live in. Does this sentiment get reflected in the poem ‘I Feel Your Pain’ also? Discuss the comparison in groups or pairs.

Know about the author

William Shakespeare was born on April 23, 1564, in Stratford-on-Avon. He was regarded as the foremost dramatist of his time. His sonnets were composed between 1593 and 1601. The Sonnets of Shakespeare, 154 in number, all written in the form of three quatrains and a couplet that is now recognized as Shakespearean. The sonnets fall into two groups: sonnets 1-126, addressed to a beloved friend, a handsome and noble young man, and sonnets 127-152, to a malignant but fascinating “Dark Lady,” whom the poet loves in spite of himself. Nearly all of Shakespeare’s sonnets examine the inevitable decay of time, and the immortalization of beauty and love in poetry.

In his poems and plays, Shakespeare invented thousands of words. His impressive expansion of the English language, according to the Oxford English Dictionary, includes such words as: birthplace, bloodsucking, courtship, dewdrop, downstairs, radiance, schoolboy, stillborn, watchdog etc.,

Shakespeare wrote more than 30 plays. These are usually divided into four categories: histories, comedies, tragedies, and romances. His earliest plays were primarily comedies and histories such as Henry VI and The Comedy of Errors, but in 1596, Shakespeare wrote Romeo and Juliet, his second tragedy, and over the next dozen years he would return to the form, writing the plays for which he is now best known: Julius Caesar, Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, Macbeth, and Antony and Cleopatra. In his final years, Shakespeare turned to the romantic with Cymbeline, A Winter’s Tale, and The Tempest.

Gentleman of Rio en Medio

- Juan A.A. Sedillo

1. It took months of negotiation to come to an understanding with the old man. He was in no hurry. What he had the most of was time. He lived up in Rio en Medio, where his people had been for hundreds of years. He tilled the same land they had tilled. His house was small and wretched, but quaint. The little creek ran through his land. His orchard was gnarled and beautiful.

Rio en Medio: a place in Santa Fe County, New Mexico, United States, negotiation: official discussion, wretched: unpleasant, quaint: unusual and attractive especially in an old fashioned way, creek: a small narrow stream or river, orchard: a piece of land in which fruit trees are grown, gnarled: (a branch of a tree) with twisted hard lumps.
2. The day of the sale he came into the office. His coat was old, green and faded. I thought of Senator Catron, who has been such a power with these people up there in the mountains. Perhaps it was one of his old Prince Alberts. He wore gloves. They were old and torn and his finger tips showed through them. He carried a cane, but it was only the skeleton of a worn-out umbrella. Behind him walked one of his innumerable kin—a dark young man with eyes like a gazelle.

3. The old man bowed to all of us in the room. Then he removed his hat and gloves, slowly and carefully. Chaplin once did that in a picture, in a bank—he was the janitor. Then he handed his things to the boy who stood obediently behind the old man’s chair.

4. There was a great deal of conversation about rain and his family. He was very proud of his large family. Finally we got down to business. Yes, he would sell, as he had agreed, for twelve hundred dollars, in cash. We would buy, and the money was ready. “Don Anselmo,” I said to him in Spanish, “We have made a discovery. You remember that we sent that surveyor, that engineer, up there to survey your land so as to make the deed. Well, he finds that you own more than eight acres. He tells us that your land extends across the river and that you own almost twice as much as you thought.” He didn’t know that. “And now, Don Anselmo,” I added, “These Americans are buena gente, they are good people, and they are willing to pay you for the additional land as well, at the same rate per acre, so that instead of twelve hundred dollars you will get almost twice as much, and the money is here for you.”

5. The old man hung his head for a moment in thought. Then he stood up and stared at me, “Friend,” he said, “I do not like to have you speak to me in that manner.” I kept still and let him have his say. “I know these

Don : Spanish title of respect much like “sir” in English, buena gente : good people.
Americans are good people, and that is why I have agreed to sell to them, but I do not care to be insulted. I have agreed to sell my house and land for twelve hundred dollars and that is the price.”

6. I argued with him but it was useless. Finally he signed the deed and took the money but refused to take more than the amount agreed upon. Then he shook hands all around, put on his ragged gloves, took his stick and walked out with the boy behind him.

7. A month later my friends had moved into Rio en Medio. They had replastered the old house, pruned the trees, patched the fence and moved in summer. One day they came back to the office to complain. The children of the village were overrunning their property. They came everyday and played under the trees, built little play fences around them, and took blossoms. When they were spoken to, they only laughed and talked back good-naturedly in Spanish.

8. I sent a messenger up to the mountains for Don Anselmo. It took a week to arrange another meeting. When he arrived he repeated his previous preliminary performance. He wore the same faded cutaway, carried the same stick and was accompanied by the boy again. He shook hands all around, sat down with the boy behind his chair, and talked about the weather. Finally I broached the subject. “Don Anselmo, about the ranch you sold to these people. They are good people and want to be your good neighbours always. When you sold to them you signed a document, a deed, and in that deed you agreed to several things. One thing was that they were to have the complete possession of the property. Now, Don Anselmo, it seems that every day the children of the village overrun the orchard and spend most of their time there. We would like to know if you, as the most respected man in the village, could not stop them from doing so in order that these people might enjoy their new home more in peace.”

9. Don Anselmo stood up. “We have all learned to love these Americans,” he said, “because they are good people and good neighbours. I sold them my property because I knew they were good people, but I did not sell them the trees in the orchard.”

11. “Yes, I admit that,” he said. “You know,” he added, “I am the oldest man in the village. Almost everyone there is my relative and all the children of Rio en Medio are my sobrinos and nietos, my descendants. Every time a child has been born in Rio en Medio since I took possession of the house from my mother, I have planted a tree for that child. The trees in that orchard are not mine, Senor, they belong to the children of the village. Every person in Rio en Medio born since the railroad came to Santa Fe owns a tree in that orchard. I did not sell the trees because I could not. They are not mine.”

Task 1: Here is an imaginary conversation between the old man and the story teller in the act of negotiation. Take roles and say it. Note the underlined expressions. They are used to seek one's opinion.

Story Teller: Good morning, Don Anselmo.
The Old man: Very good morning.
Story Teller: Please be seated.
The Old man: Thank you. (he sits)
Story Teller: The weather is fantastic today, isn’t it?

The Old man: Of course. Well, you sent for me. What’s the matter?

Story Teller: You know, we’re thinking of buying a site for our American friends. Please meet them. (He introduces them to each other. They shake hands.) I heard you want to sell your land across the river. Am I right?

The Old man: You’re right. That’s just what I’m thinking about.

Story Teller: If you don’t mind, please quote your price.

The Old man: Sure. It’s twelve hundred dollars.

Story Teller: You mean twelve hundred dollars for the entire site?

The Old man: That’s exactly what I mean.

Do you agree with the price?

Story Teller: No. I was only thinking that the land is really worth more than what you have quoted. How about 20,000 dollars?

(turns towards his American friend) Friend, what’s your opinion?

Friend: I do agree with your quote. Of course.

Story Teller: Would you care to accept my price?

The Old man: (seeming to be hurt) Friend, I don’t like to have you speak to me in that manner. Very sorry.

Story Teller: (Apologetically) Excuse me please. I never meant to hurt you. If I did, I’m terribly sorry.

What do you think you would do?
The Old man: All right. Please see, I know the Americans. They’re very generous, but I don’t like to be insulted. If I say twelve hundred dollars, it is the price. I don’t need a cent more.

Story Teller: Thank you. Here’s twelve hundred dollars. A cheque, if you don’t mind.

The Old man: Not at all (he takes the cheque and signs the bond)

Task 2: Write a dialogue by using some of the given phrases asking for the listener’s opinion to an imaginary offer.

Read and respond

Task 1: Read the passage carefully and answer the questions set on it.

A small crowd had gathered around the entrance to the park. His curiosity aroused, Robert crossed the road to see what was happening. He found that the centre of attraction was an old man with a performing monkey. The monkey’s tricks, he soon discovered, were in no way remarkable. So, after throwing a few pennies in the dirty hat which the man had placed on the pavement, Robert moved off, along with other members of the crowd.

At this point the man suddenly let out a loud cry. Everyone turned to see what had happened. The man was bending over his monkey, which now lay quite still on the pavement. He picked up the apparently lifeless body and holding it close to him, began to weep. A young man stepped forward from the crowd and taking some money from his pocket, dropped it into the hat. Robert and several other people did likewise, until the pennies in the hat were covered with silver coins. Meanwhile the man continued to hold the dead monkey in his arms and seemed to take no notice of what was going on about him.

A few months later, Robert came across the old man, again in another part of the city. The man had a monkey, bought no doubt, with the money the crowd had given him. It did not, however, seem any better at its tricks than the previous one. Robert was pleased to see that the old man was still able to earn a living, though on this occasion, having partly paid for the monkey out of his own pocket, he did not feel inclined to throw any money into the hat.

But the performance was not yet over. Once again the old man let out a loud cry. Once again the monkey lay still on the pavement. The man picked up the “dead” monkey and clutching it in his arms began to weep. The same young man stepped forward and threw some money into the hat. Again the crowd followed suit – except Robert. Smiling to himself, he went on his way, amazed at the man’s audacity.

1. Robert went to the other side of the road because __________
   a) he wanted to help the old man by giving him some money
   b) he wanted to see why the crowd had gathered
   c) he was curious to watch the monkey’s tricks
   d) he had seen one of his friends over there

2. The word “pavement” in the fifth line of para 1 is __________
   a) a temporary tent which is used for public entertainment
   b) a path at the side of a road for people to walk on
   c) a small building made of wood
   d) a shelf on the road
3. The old man let out a loud cry suddenly in order to __________
   a) keep the monkey quiet for some time
   b) let the crowd know that his monkey was dead
   c) let the crowd know that he was a poor man
   d) show that he was hurt

4. Why did the old man begin to weep?

5. What wise thing did Robert do after he watched the monkey’s tricks for the second time?

you buy me, I wait with muddy holes and car lot eyes I stare.......

Then someone tickles me, plants life ... fruit grass... trees/ children dance/someone

You come with guns
a chainlink necklace
chokes me now.

I Draw Nourishment

- (P.T. Narasimhachar) (ಪ್ರೈಂ ನರಸಿಂಹಾಚಾರ)

Translated by Narasimha Murthy. K.

I draw nourishment from dirt and slush,
I display bright blossoms to the sky.
I feed through my trunk by roots at my feet,
My branches, see, are heavy with luscious fruit.

When the earth lies parched in summer’s sweltering heat
I glow green with tendrils, bursting with sap,
To the severe sun I oppose my foliage of hair
Casting cool shade below.

If winter comes, I strip before the snow,
Bare I stand shedding all my leaves.
When the devil of storm sweeps in the monsoons,
I forgo not a single leaf.
I am not soiled nor am I unclean,
Nor do I live for myself.
I do not do anyone harm,
Nor do I seek anyone’s favour.

On whoever has needs I bestow whatever they need,
Giving, giving, giving to the very end I die.
Even dead, I shake not, I am fragrant wood,
It’s you, dead, that are a rotting stinking corpse.

1 Is the theme of this poem the same as that of “I am the land, I wait”? Who do you think the word 'I' stands for in the poem "I Draw Nourishment"?

UNIT – 4

Before you read

Not gold but only men can Make a nation great and strong;
Men who for truth and honour's sake
Stand fast and suffer long.

Brave men who work while others sleep,
Who dare while others fly....
They build a nation's pillars deep
And lift them to the sky.

All of us love our country. Don't we? But some people believe soldiers and politicians are the only people who can build the nation and contribute directly to its growth. Do you agree?

How can simple or common man contribute to strengthen the country? Discuss with your friends.

Dr. B.R. Ambedkar

- Sri R. Venkataraman

1. One trait which marked Babasaheb during his student days and, in fact, throughout his life was that he was a voracious reader. He had an insatiable thirst for books. He bought books by curtailing his daily needs. In New York he is said to have purchased about 2,000 old books. And it is recorded that at the time of the Second Round Table Conference in London, he bought so many books that they had to be sent to India in 32 boxes.

2. It is important to record here one major influence on Dr. Ambedkar. While in the USA, he was drawn to the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the USA which gave freedom to the Black Americans. He saw at once the parallel of the situation for the Depressed Classes in India. On returning home, Babasaheb came to be greatly influenced by the life and work of Mahatma Phule, the votary of a classless society and women’s uplift. The need as well as the feasibility of reform impressed itself on Babasaheb’s mind and he decided to devote all his time and talents for the amelioration of his underprivileged brethren. Newspapers started by him such as the Mooknayak, Bahishkrit Bharat and Samata were at once recognised as authentic voices of the Depressed Classes. Likewise, institutions set up by him such as the Hitakarini Sabha and the Independent Labour Party of India became vehicles of change. During the same period, Gandhiji was pioneering his epic reform of Indian society which included the uplift of Depressed Classes whom Gandhiji had termed Harijans.

3. Babasaheb was elected to the Bombay Legislative Assembly in the elections under the Constitution of India Act, 1935. Babasaheb made effective contributions to the debates in the Assembly on a variety of subjects. His flair for legislative work became evident to the whole nation.

   a) purchasing books           b) attending conferences
   c) reading books              d) importing books

2. Pick out the word in the first paragraph which means ‘a quality that makes a person or a thing different from another.’

3. How did the fourteenth amendment of the American Constitution benefit the Black Americans?

4. What did Mahatma Phule work for?

5. Mookanayak, Bahishkrit Bharat and Samata were ____________
   a) Voice mails   b) Newspapers  c) Political parties

6. Gandhiji termed the depressed classes as ____________ voracious: (contextually) very eager for knowledge, insatiable: that which cannot be satisfied, amelioration: make something better.

4. Soon the Constituent Assembly of India afforded Dr. Ambedkar the opportunity to give the most notable and permanent shape to his social philosophy and to his undying faith in the dignity of human beings. Babasaheb was not in the Congress, but it must be said to the credit of the farsighted and objective leadership of the Indian National Congress that it requested Dr. Ambedkar to serve on the Drafting Committee of the Constituent Assembly and made him its Chairman.

5. As Chairman of the Drafting Committee, Dr. Ambedkar anticipated every conceivable requirement of the new polity. Drawing from the examples and experience of other nations and the distinctive needs of our own society, he raised, brick by brick, the magnificent edifice which now stands as the Fundamental Rights in the Constitution of India. There were, of course, other luminaries on the Committee like Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar, K.M. Munshi and N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar who also made vital contributions to the process of Constitution-making. But if there is one person who will be remembered as the pilot of the various provisions of the Indian Constitution, it will surely be Dr. Ambedkar. It devolved on Dr. Ambedkar to explain (to the Assembly), with a combination of tact and frankness, and utmost patience, the meaning and scope of the different provisions of the Draft Constitution. He had the rare gift of unravelling the most complicated legal concepts in a language which the laymen understood. Dr. Ambedkar, aided by the indefatigable Constitutional Adviser, B.N. Rau, performed this task matchlessly.

6. Dr. Ambedkar had a clear perception of the mutuality of the three pillars of State—the legislature, the executive, and the judiciary. He realised that the jurisdiction of each should be clear and untrammeled. At the same time, he had a sense of the importance of the role of citizens.

   The following observation he made is significant:

   The Constitution is a fundamental document. It is a document which defines the position and power of the three organs of the State—the executive, the judiciary and the legislature. It also defines the powers of the executive and the powers of the legislature as against the citizens, as we have done in our chapter dealing with Fundamental Rights. In fact, the purpose of a Constitution is not merely to create the organs of the State but to limit their authority, because, if no limitation was imposed upon the authority of the organs, there will be complete tyranny and complete oppression.

conceive : think, edifice : (here) system, devolve : be transferred or passed to somebody, indefatigable : never giving up, perception : ability to see, hear, understand.

1. Draft is a banking term. How is the word used in the context of this lesson?
2. Dr. Ambedkar was not in the Congress party. Yet he was made the chairman of the drafting committee. Why?
3. He raised it 'brick by brick'. In this context, what was raised?
4. Who were the other notable members of the drafting committee?
5. Ambedkar had 'rare gifts.' What were they? Can you think of your own 'gifts'? Share them with your class.
6. Constitution is a fundamental document to both the ruler and the ruled. How?

7. Jawaharlal Nehru chose Dr. Ambedkar to be the first Law Minister of independent India. This was a recognition of Dr. Ambedkar’s skills in the field of law and legislation as also a tribute to his vision of social justice - a vision which was sought to be infused into the new Indian polity. But above all, this was a tribute to the success of Babasaheb Dr. Ambedkar’s own campaigns against social injustice. Who could have dreamt that one born to a Mahar family would one day become not only a Law Minister but a Law-maker and be hailed as the modern Manu?

8. In the four decades and more since Independence, much progress has been achieved in providing equality of opportunities to the people. Members of the Scheduled Castes find doors which had been closed to them for centuries, being opened. No legal bars exist today for self-expression or self-advancement. They are enrolling themselves in institutes of higher learning and entering public services. They have come to occupy high offices of State, both at the Centre and in the States. Judges, ambassadors and governors have been drawn from their ranks. And they have acquitted themselves creditably in all these positions of responsibility.

9. And yet, much remains to be done on the social plane. The Annual Reports of the Commissioner for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes list several violations of the law and several instances where, not withstanding the statute book, members of the Scheduled Castes have been discriminated against. Babasaheb Ambedkar’s work will be truly complete only when social discrimination is completely eliminated from our society.

10. Babasaheb Ambedkar always stressed the importance of constitutional methods to achieve social objectives. In an interesting observation, he once described the methods of civil disobedience, non-cooperation and satyagraha as the “grammar of anarchy”. The observation assumes importance in the context of public agitation in free India. It is one thing to utilise these methods in a struggle against an alien power. The right to rebellion is recognised against a government without people’s consent, be it alien or national dictatorship, but not in a democracy based on free and fair elections. Misdirected and volatile, such agitations invariably result in the loss of lives and public property.

2. Are you aware of the facilities provided by the Social Welfare Department? Mention any two.
3. After independence, members of the Scheduled Castes have found doors opened to them. How?
4. All people should be given equal opportunities to prove themselves. How are the members of the Scheduled Castes proving themselves?
5. Babasaheb Ambedkar considers public agitation in free India as unconstitutional. Why?

11. About 2500 years ago the Buddha had questioned the caste divisions in India. He said, “The only valid divisions are the divisions between those who are noble and wholesome and those who are ignoble and unwholesome”. The Tamil poetess Avvai had said, similarly, that there are only two castes in the world, namely, the charitable who give and are superior and the misers who do not and are, therefore, inferior. Throughout the course of Indian history, great sages and saints exposed the hollowness of these divisions and sought to bring all the communities of India together in a creative partnership. But caste, by virtue of its power structure, showed itself to be firmly entrenched.

12. Under the policy of “Divide and Rule”, the British rulers exaggerated caste distinctions and divided the people of India further to strengthen their hegemony over us. It was given to two great Indians of our time. Mahatma Gandhi and Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar, to repudiate caste and to proclaim the oneness of the Hindu community. Gandhiji did so by reminding the higher castes of their duty towards the Depressed Classes. Babasaheb Ambedkar did the same by reminding them of their inherent rights to equality with the higher and more powerful castes. One stressed the duties, the other stressed the rights together, they brought about a veritable revolution in social thought.

13. When Babasaheb passed away, in December 1956, Jawaharlal Nehru made a moving reference in the Lok Sabha. Describing Babasaheb as “a symbol of revolt”, he said:

“I have no doubt that, whether we agreed with him or not in many matters, that perseverance, that persistence and that, if I may use the word, sometimes virulence of his opposition to all this did keep the people’s mind awake and did not allow them to become complacent about matters which could not be forgotten, and helped in rousing up those groups in our country which had suffered for so long in the past. It is, therefore, sad that such a prominent champion of the oppressed and depressed in India and one who took such an important part in our activities, has passed away.”

14. There can be no doubt that the day is not far off when Babasaheb Ambedkar’s dream of samata will become a reality.

5. 'they brought about a veritable revolution in social thought.' a] who are 'they'? b] What 'revolution' is referred to here? c] How did they bring about the revolution?
6. Why did Nehru describe Dr. Ambedkar as 'a symbol of revolt'?

What is the poet saying about India in the above lines? Discuss.

Listen to the poem (your teacher reads the poem aloud.)

The Song Of India

V.K. Gokak

‘What song shall I sing of you, my Mother?’
I asked
‘Shall I sing
Of the Himalayas with their snow-born peaks,
Of the three seas that wash your palm?
Shall I sing
Of your clear dawn with its pure gold-streaks?’

Said the Mother imperturbable, calm:
'Sing of the beggar and the leper
That swarm my streets.
Sing of the filth and the dirt
That foul my sylvan retreats.

'What song shall I sing of you, my Mother?'
I asked.
‘Shall I sing
Of your rock-cut temples, epics in stone,
Of your children that died to call you their own,
Their very own?'

_wash your palm_: (here) sweep along the coastline. _Swarm_: (here) crowd. _Sylvan retreats_: a place of seclusion in deep woods. _A pitiful thing_: (here) it refers to the poet himself. _Indexing_: indicating. _Put on the page_: to get recognition.
Of the seers and prophets that hewed the straight path
For the man that pilgrims alone?’
Said the Mother in indignant words
That beat into my ears like gong,
That flew about me, a pitiful thing,
Like great white birds:
‘Sing of the millions that toil.
Sing of the wrinkled face
Indexing ignorance.
Sing of the helpless child
Born in a bleak, dark home.’

Nervous, I yet would ask,
Deeming it my task:
‘What song shall I sing of you, my Mother?
What song?
Shall I sing of the dam and the lake?
Of steel mills, the ship-building yard?
Of the men that work hard
To technologise, to put you on the page
Of the Atomic Age?’

Said the Mother: 'Of these you may sing.
But sing also of the strikes, early and late,
Of iron men that come in their wake,
Of class-war and its correlate.

Querulous, I said:
‘Is there no song that I can sing of you’
Heart-whole, unalloyed?
A song bathed in the stainless blue
Unvapouring in the void?

\textbf{iron men}: harsh men, \textit{in their wake}: who come right behind them, \textbf{class-war}: conflict between the privileged and the underprivileged, \textbf{querulous}: complaining, \textbf{heart-whole}: complete, \textbf{unvapouring in the void}: that which does not disappear into nothingness, \textbf{heaved}: moved with power.
At that the Mother rose, draped in blue sky.
Milk-white oceans heaved round her. Their waves
Were the entrancing and enthroning light
On which she sat and wrote the Book of the Morrow.
Her forehead opened like earth's destiny
Yielding the Sun-God, cancelling all sorrow.
It was clear dawn. Like a nightmare fled the night
And the sun-beam was as the Hand that saves.

Understand the poem:

1. Identify the two speakers in the poem. What does the speaker want to sing about?
2. What are the epics? Why does the poet call the temples as ‘epics in stone’?
3. Who does the poet mean by ‘of your children that died to call their own’?
4. What, according to the poet, is the contribution of the seers and prophets?
5. Why is the poet ‘querulous’? What does he want to do?
6. How is he answered? Describe the vision. (Refer stanza 4)
7. What do the night, the sun god and the clear dawn represent?

Read and appreciate:

1. What is the picture of India that you get in stanza 1 of the poem?
2. How does the poet describe the Mother’s anger? Name the figure of speech used in stanza 2.
3. Explain the lines ‘A song bathed in the stainless blue unvapouring in the void.’
4. What does ‘the Motherland writing the Book of the Morrow’ signify?
5. Write in brief your vision of the future of India.
Know about the poet:

Vinayak Krishna Gokak (1909-1992) was born at Savanur, Dharwad district and was educated at Karnataka college and then at Oxford. He is a widely travelled man and he held several important educational posts. He received the Padmashree award and Sahitya academy award and Jnanpith award.

As a poet, he was one of the leading figures of the 'Navya-kavya' (new poetry) movement of the 1950s in Kannada poetry. In this poem, the poet proclaims that the time has come to establish the new ideals.

MUSIC

I hear the music
Music is love
Music is life
Music can tell a story.

Music cheers
But also brings memories
What’s so special about music?
When I listen to music it takes me to another world.

Music is my passion
Music soothes the soul
Music can take away the pain
Our life is music.

Music inspires me
Music flows through me
Do you hear it?
Come dance with me tonight.

Perhaps you would like to read a real life incident in which a boy’s ambition was fulfilled at last. If so,

The Concert

- Shanta Rameshwar Rao

1. One morning, in a small apartment in Bombay, a girl of about sixteen looked up from the newspaper and said excitedly, ‘Pandit Ravi Shankar’s playing tomorrow at the Shanmukhananda Auditorium.’

_Pandit Ravishankar_: An Indian musician, composer and a sitar player, _excited_: feeling or showing happiness and enthusiasm.
‘Sh-sh,’ said her mother pointing to the figure sleeping on the bed. ‘You’ll wake him up. You know he needs all the sleep and rest he can get.’

2. But the boy on the bed was not asleep. ‘Pandit Ravi Shankar!’ he said. ‘Pandit Ravi Shankar, the sitar maestro?’ He raised himself up on his elbows for one second, then fell back. But his eyes were shining. ‘We mustn’t miss the chance,’ he said. ‘I’ve –I’ve –always wanted to hear him and see him.....’

3. ‘Lie down son, lie down.’ His mother sprang to his side. ‘He actually raised himself up without help,’ she murmured with a catch in her throat and her eyes turned to the idols on a corner shelf. The prayer which she uttered endlessly came unbidden to her lips.

4. ‘I must hear him and see him,’ the boy repeated. ‘It’s the chance of a lifetime.’ Then he began to cough and gasp for breath and had to be given oxygen from the cylinder that stood under the bed. But his large eyes were fixed on his sister.

1. Which word in the first paragraph describes the manner of the girl when she saw the newspaper?
2. Why do you think the mother cautioned the girl?
3. ‘We mustn’t miss the chance’.
   a) What chance did the boy not like to miss? Why? Do you think the boy would get a chance in future?
4. Imagine you were the mother of the boy. Would you have reacted differently in the situation? If so, how?
5. Read the third paragraph. He raised himself up without any help. The mother murmured with ‘a catch in her throat’ on seeing him. What does this suggest about the condition of the boy? Read the fourth paragraph and answer.

maestro : a great performer, especially a musician, sprang : moved quickly and suddenly towards a particular place, with a catch in her throat : with a feeling of great sorrow, unbidden : (usually used after the verb ) without being asked, invited or expected.
5. Smita bit her lip in self-reproach. She had been so excited at seeing the announcement that she had not remembered that her brother was very ill. She had seen how the doctors had shaken their heads gravely and spoken words that neither she nor her parents could understand. But somewhere deep inside, Smita had known the frightening truth that Anant was going to die. The word cancer had hung in the air—her brother was dying of cancer even though she pretended that all would be well and they would return together, a small family of four, to their home in Gaganpur. And he was only fifteen, and the best table-tennis player in the school and the fastest runner. He was learning to play the sitar; they were both taking sitar lessons, but Anant was better than her as in many other things. He was already able to compose his own tunes to the astonishment of their guru. Then cancer had struck and they had come to Bombay, so that he could be treated at the cancer hospital in the city.

6. Whenever they came to Bombay the family stayed with Aunt Sushila. Her apartment was not big but there was always room for them.

   They had come with high hopes in the miracles of modern science. They told themselves that Anant would be cured at the hospital, and he would again walk and run and even take part in the forthcoming table-tennis tournament. And, he would play the sitar and perhaps would be a great sitarist one day. But his condition grew worse with each passing day and the doctors at the cancer hospital said, ‘Take him home. Give him the things he likes, indulge him,’ and they knew then that the boy had not many days to live. But they did not voice their fears. They laughed and smiled and talked and surrounded Anant with whatever made him happy. They fulfilled his every need and gave whatever he asked for. And now he was asking to go to the concert. ‘The chance of a lifetime,’ he was saying. ‘When you are better,’ his mother said. ‘This is not the last time they are going to play’.

7. Smita stood at the window looking at the traffic, her eyes filled with tears. Her mother whispered, ‘But you Smita, you must go. Your father will take you.’

self-reproach: a blame or criticism against oneself/herself, gravely: seriously, pretend: to behave in a particular way, in order to make other people believe something that is not true, astonishment: a feeling of a very great surprise, miracle: an act or event that does not follow the laws of nature and is believed to be caused by God, hung in the air: worrying someone.
When she was alone with Aunt Sushila, Smita cried out in a choked voice, ‘No, how can I? We’ve always done things together, Anant and I.’

‘A walk in the park might make you feel better,’ said Aunt Sushila and Smita was grateful for her suggestion.

8. In the park, people were walking, running; playing ball, doing yogic exercises, feeding the ducks and eating roasted gram and peanuts. Smita felt alone in their midst. She was lost in her thoughts.

9. Suddenly a daring thought came to her and as she hurried home she said to herself, ‘Why not? There’s no harm in trying it.’

‘It would be nice to go to the concert. I don’t know when we’ll get another opportunity to hear Pandit Ravi Shankar,’ she said to her mother later. And her father agreed to get the tickets.

choked voice : voice filled with sadness.
10. The next day as Smita and her father were leaving for the concert, her brother smiled and said, ‘Enjoy yourself,’ though the words came out in painful gasps. ‘Lucky you!’

11. Sitting beside her father in the gallery, Smita heard as in a dream the thundering welcome the audience gave the great master. Then the first notes came over the air, and Smita felt as if the gates of enchantment and wonder were opening. Spellbound, she listened to the unfolding ragas, the slow plaintive notes, the fast twinkling ones, but all the while the plan she had decided on the evening before remained firmly in her mind. ‘The chance of a life time’, she heard Anant’s voice in every beat of the tabla.

The concert came to an end and the audience gave the artists a standing ovation.

A large moustachioed man made a long boring speech. Then followed the presentation of bouquets. Then more applause and the curtain came down. The people began to move towards the exits.

12. Now was the time. Smita wriggled her way through the crowds towards the stage. Then she went up the steps that led to the wings, her heart beating loudly. In the wings a small crowd had gathered to talk about the evening concert, to help carry bouquets and teacups and instruments.

13. He was there, standing with the man who played the tabla for him—the great wizard of music, Ustad Allah Rakha. Her knees felt weak, her tongue dry. But she went up, and standing before them, her hands folded, ‘Oh Sir,’ she burst out.

‘Yes?’ he asked questioningly but kindly. And her story came pouring out, the story of her brother who lay sick at home, and of how he longed to hear him and the Ustad play.

enchantment: a feeling of great pleasure, ovation: enthusiastic clapping by the audience who stand up from their seats as a sign of their appreciation, wriggle: to twist and turn the body or part of it with quick short movements, wizard: a person who is especially good at some art or achievement.
‘Little girl,’ said the moustached man who had made the long speech. ‘Panditji is a busy man. You must not bother him with such requests.’

But Pandit Ravi Shankar smiled and motioned him to be quiet. He turned to Ustad Sahib and said, ‘What shall we do, Ustad Sahib?’

The Ustad moved the wad of paan from one cheek to another. ‘Tomorrow morning we perform for the boy—Yes?’ he said.

‘Yes’, Panditji replied. ‘It’s settled then.’

14. It was a very excited Smita who came home late that night. Anant was awake, breathing the oxygen from the cylinder.

‘Did you—did you hear him?’ he whispered.

‘I did,’ she replied, ‘and I spoke to him, and he’ll come tomorrow morning with the tabla Ustad, and they’ll play for you.’

15. And the following morning, Aunt Sushila’s neighbours saw two men getting out of a taxi which pulled up outside their block...They could not believe their eyes. ‘It is...It’s not possible?’ they said.

16. Pandit Ravi Shankar and Ustad Allah Rakha went up the wooden staircase and knocked softly on the door of Aunt Sushila’s apartment. They went in, sat down on the divan by the window and played for the boy, surrounding him with a great and beautiful happiness as life went out of him, gently, very gently.

{This is a true story, but all the names except Pandit Ravi Shankar’s and Ustad Allah Rakha’s have been changed.}

bother: trouble or worry, Allah Rakha: An Indian tabla player, a frequent accompanist to Pandit Ravishankar, block: a tall building that has flats.

Finite and Non-finite verbs

Verbs can occur in sentences in a variety of shapes or forms. For example, if we take the verb ‘write’, this verb can be used in sentences in these five forms or shapes.

e.g.,

a. Vinay writes well.
b. Vinay and Vijay write to each other.
c. Vinay wrote to me about his tour.
d. Vinay is writing all the time.
e. Vinay has written me a long letter.
f. Vinay has decided to write a letter to the chairman.

Verbs- writes, write and wrote are the finite verbs, since they indicate tense-present or past. A finite verb carries tense on its own.

If we take the other forms of write namely, writing, written, and to write they do not indicate the tense. Such forms of the verbs are called Non-finite verbs. A Non-finite verb does not carry tense on its own.

e.g. : Some verbs are underlined in the passage given below. See how they are classified into finite and nonfinite verbs.

They were (1) waiting (2) for the bus. After a long time, it came (3). The bus was (4) heavily crowded (5). Anyway, they managed (6) to push (7) through and they squeezed (8) themselves in. They felt (9) tired (10) as they had (11) been (12) waiting (13) for long. I wonder (14) who can (15) ever improve (16) our transport system.

_Music is the voice of the soul_
Before you read

Like the Ancient Mariner in Coleridge’s poem, the old jazz musician feels he has a message for the people of the world. He is a pathetic figure, but at the same time, a commanding artist. He has the power in him to make people listen, a gift that not many possess. He is silent in speech, but eloquent in music.

His frayed-collar faded-blue old shirt turns dark with sweat and the old necktie undone drops loosely about the worn old jacket? rough unshaven face shows pain in each wrinkle but there he stands. in self-brought solitude head 20

Seal

- William Jay Smith

See how he dives
From the rocks with a zoom!
See how he darts
Through his watery room
Past crabs and eels
And green seaweed,
Past fluffs of sandy Minnow feed!
See how he swims
With a swerve and a twist,
A flip of the flipper,
A flick of the wrist!
Quicksilver-quick,
Softer than spray,
Down he plunges
And sweeps away;
Before you can think,
Before you can utter Words like “Dill pickle”
Or “Apple butter,”
Back up he swims
Past Sting Ray and Shark,
Out with a zoom,
A whoop, a bark;
Before you can say
Whatever you wish,
He plops at your side
With a mouthful of fish!

The Discovery

Herman Ould

(Christopher Columbus first saw the light of the New World on the night of 11th October, 1492. Before he could achieve this great feat, he was often at open defiance with his crew. Based on this, the play builds up a conflict of great imagination. Read the play of Herman Ould to see how this conflict is resolved.)

The Devil laughs.
But God is dumb!
Juan (sharply): They ought to stop that. The captain is always furious when he hears it.

Diego: Shan’t we even sing to keep our spirits? Sh!

(They attend with assumed assiduity to the rigging, Pedro Gutierrez comes in; he is somewhat surprised when he sees the others.)

Pedro: Who’s that?

Diego (rising): Diego Garcia and Juan Patino, sir.

Pedro (inclined to be communicative): It’s dark. I would welcome the moon...

Diego: Aye, aye, Don Pedro. Some of us would welcome the coast of Spain still more.

Pedro (pumping): Impatient, Diego?

Diego (surlily): There are limits to patience, sir.

Pedro (humouring him): And you’ve reached them, eh?

Diego: We’re like bats trying to fly by day. It’s time he gave way.

Why should one man have the lives of fifty in his hands?

Pedro (with authority): I hope we are not entertaining mutinous thoughts, Diego.

Diego: Mutiny is an ugly word, sir.

Pedro: And an uglier deed.

(Juan, finishing his job at the rigging, rises, and with a salute goes off. Columbus comes in. He is a tall, well-built man of forty-six. Hair prematurely white, complexion fair, almost ruddy. A man of quick temper and irritability which he controls only with an effort. His face, in repose, is melancholic. Seeing Don Pedro in conversation with Diego, he looks a trifle suspicious. He turns quickly to Diego.)

Columbus: That candle on the foremast is guttering; see that it is put right.

Diego (sullenly): Aye, aye, sir.

Columbus (recalling him): And, Diego!

Diego (coming back): Yes, sir.

Columbus: This is the quarter-deck.

Diego: Yes, sir.

Columbus: A good sailor knows his place.

Diego: (with repressed fury): Yes, sir.

(Columbus points off: Diego, scarcely concealing a scowl, goes off.)

Seamen (off, singing):

Here’s a keg o’ rum
To Kingdom Come!
The Devil laughs,
But God is dumb!

(Columbus and Pedro descend to the quarter-deck.)

Columbus : Pedro, they drink too much.

Pedro : They are simple men and must have their relaxation. (The next words break from him almost involuntarily.) We have not all your visions, Captain.

Columbus (impatiently) : It is my will. Is that not enough?

Pedro (bowing his head) : I am answered.

Columbus (hastily) : Forgive me, Don Pedro. A curb for my tongue – oh, a curb for my unbridled tongue, my worst enemy! (more quietly,) My will, friend, because God's will, Shall that suffice?

Pedro (not appeased): I do not claim your confidence, sir.

Columbus (thundering again) : I claim yours. (The sound of the seamen’s song is again heard.) A blight upon their singing! Bid them stop. (Pedro goes off, with an air of discontent. When he is alone, Columbus looks out to sea muttering.) Mystery? Would God implant the desire to solve mysteries and not provide the solution? (Suddenly Pepe runs up the steps to the poop. Columbus is startled.) Who is that?

Pepe: I don’t speak to them. I hate them.

Columbus: ‘Sh, Pepe! And get you gone! (Pepe turns reluctantly.) Quick! (The boy goes more quickly.) Here! You heard what Don Pedro said?

(Pedro is half-way down the stairs to the quarter-deck when Guillermo Ires and other seamen rush in an angry mass towards Columbus, growling like infuriated animals.)

carcass : dead body, blink : to shine dimly or intermittently, not without diffidence : with some hesitation, infuriated : with great anger.
Columbus (in a thunderous voice): Stop! What is the meaning of this wild uproar? (The men stand transfixed.) The first man to move shall spend the rest of the night in irons! (There is a perceptible pause, during which nobody moves. Then, with a wild cry, Guillermo Ires breaks away from the others and advances towards Columbus.)

Guillermo: And who’s to put him in irons? We are thirty to one.

Columbus (calmly): If nobody else is available for the office, I will perform it myself. Get below! Let me hear no more of this.

Guillermo (in high excitement): We’ve stood too much. We’ve been duped day in, day out. We’re men with the common feelings of men. We want our homes and our families. I say the Santa Maria shall turn her helm towards Spain at once, or we are not men but sheep.

Columbus (still calm): And who shall navigate her?

Guillermo: There’s plenty here who can do that. The Devil’s with you, we all know that, riding the easterly wind; but we are not men unused to the sea. Once clear of this Devil’s track to nowhere, we’ll blow our way back home. (Signs of assent from the rest of the crew. Columbus raises his hand, appealing for silence. He is paler than his wont, but very calm.)

Columbus: Don Guillermo, you are an excellent sailor, a man of abundant resourcefulness. Someday, if your tongue does not run away with your discretion, you will achieve prosperity in your calling. Today you are an able-bodied seaman and no more: I am your captain. Your duty is to obey me as mine is to obey the Royal Sovereigns of Spain who sent me. Let that be clearly understood between us and we shall not fall out. Now return to your duties.

transfixed: stopped, helm: a lever or wheel controlling the rudder of a ship for steering, wont: to have the habit of doing something, discretion: ability to do right thinking, in irons: chained, abundant: a lot of.
(Again a perceptible pause. Columbus’s authoritative manner holds them. Presently Diego breaks out.)

Diego: Words for children! Froth and scum! We are men: reason with us!

Columbus: Silence!

(The tone of authority calms the men, who remain, however, in a huddled crowd, murmuring discontentedly. Columbus turns and goes up the stairs to the poop, where he stands and looks down upon the men.)

Diego (snarling): I suppose you think you’re on holy ground now?

(He bounds towards the stairs.)

Voices (tumultuously): Have him down! Pitch him overboard! Put him in irons! Devil’s tool! Italian renegade! (They are about to stampede up the poop gangway, when Pepe runs to the foot of the stairs and stands with arms spread out.)

Pepe: Cowards! Cowards! You will have to kill me first!

Voices: Out of the way! Devil’s whelp! Lick-spittle!

Columbus: What! Does that child stand between me and death?

(Silence follows the commencement of his speech.)

Pepe (going to him quickly): My captain!

(The men are somewhat sheepish.)

Columbus: Pepe! This is a voyage of discovery. (The men growl.) I set out to discover a New World, a radiant land beyond unknown seas; to find new wealth and dominion for our Sovereign King and Queen, new souls for the sacrifice of our Saviour to redeem. So far I have discovered but one thing. (He pauses and continues with slow deliberation.) I have discovered that when a man is given a vision he must follow it alone. Loyalty passes like seaweed on an outgoing tide. Friendship breaks as a mast hollowed by worms breaks. Discipline, duty and honourable obedience are bubbles that burst at the first contact. There remains but oneself. That is my only discovery so far, Pepe.

Pepe (his eyes gleaming with excitement): Captain, I am loyal, I am still obedient, still your devoted servant...

Columbus (with some emotion): I am not ungrateful.

Pedro (scraping his throat, with dignity): I hope my loyalty has never been in question, sir?

(He salutes.)

Columbus (returning the salute): You have sometimes been silent, Don Pedro, when speech would have made your loyalty clear. But I thank you... (Columbus turns and looks out at sea: for a moment his attention is fixed. He peers more earnestly into the darkness. There is a movement among the men. He turns.)

whelp: dog, lick spittle: a derogatory word like "a boot-licker" radiant: bright, dominion: land to be owned, saviour: God, redeem: get something back, sheepish: resembling a sheep in meekness, stupidity, or timidity, mast: ship’s pole, deliberation: discussing issues and making decisions carefully. gleaming: shining, peers: looks.
Juan: We are simple men, sir...

Columbus (hastily): Shall simple men judge their betters?

Guillermo (surlily): We may as well wait till tomorrow, at any rate.

Columbus: Dark deeds are better done in the dark. (Guillermo, scowling, but sheepish, slinks off, followed by one or two of the seamen.)

Francisco: Desperate men do not always act up to the best that is in them, sir.

Columbus (with quiet irony): I thank you for reminding me, Francisco. Your best cannot be bettered. Good night! (Francisco half turns to speak again, but thinks better of it and goes, shame faced. Several others go too, sheepish. A brief silence, Columbus does not move; he is struggling with overwrought emotion. When he speaks, his voice is not steady.)

Columbus: Go, boy! (Pepe seizes his hand, kisses it and hastily descends to the quarter-deck and goes out.)

Columbus (turning to Pedro): Two minutes ago. Don Pedro, I saw... I thought I saw... (He peers into the darkness.) It was... It is...

Pedro (in excitement): What, sir?

Columbus: A light, faintly flickering, rising up and down. Look! (He points.)

Pedro: It is, sir! Glory be to God!  (At this moment there is a wild shout, off.)

Voice (off): It is, sir! A light! Land! Land! (A sailor comes running on, delirious with joy and excitement.)

Sailor: Did you see it, sir? A light! Blessed Mother of God! A light!

Columbus (with quiet authority): Give the order to heave to.

Note: When asking for permission to do something, we usually use the word ‘please’ to make the request sound more polite. It’s not grammatically necessary to use ‘please’ but you may sound rude if you don’t use it. A more important way of showing politeness is the tone of voice or intonation. Even if you use the word ‘please’, you can sound rude if your intonation is not correct. Generally, the longer the expression the more formal and polite it sounds. So, the tone signals politeness in a spoken request for permission.

Practise writing e-communication

Task - 1 : Study the following e-mail sent by Hemanth to his friend Shiva Shakti describing the experience of being drenched in a sudden shower of rain.

Dear Shakti,

I was going home yesterday in the afternoon. All of a sudden it started raining. It was a heavy down-pour. I had no umbrella or raincoat. I was completely drenched before I could run to a shelter nearby. I felt refreshed in the spring rain at first. The wind was blowing heavily. It made me shiver.

Other passers-by were also drenched from head to toe. They too ran for shelter. The roads were like streams. The traffic was slow. Children made paper boats and floated them in the stream. They were enjoying the rain. On the whole it was a pleasant experience.

Looking forward to your reply.

Hemanth.
Now sit with your partner/partners and imagine that you were one of the crew-mates of Columbus. You wanted to convey a message to your friend about the discovery of the New World. How would you send it in a message format?

- The date you set sail.
- Places of visit.
- Talks you listened to.
- People you met.
- Weather you had felt.

Learn grammar through communication

Types of Sentences

You have studied in the previous years that sentences are of three types, namely

1. Simple sentence

   e.g., Standing at the foot of the stairs Pepe stopped the angry men.

2. Compound sentence

   e.g., Pepe stood at the foot of the stairs and he stopped the angry men.

3. Complex sentence

   e.g., Pepe stopped the angry men as he stood at the foot of the stairs.

Graphically (1), (2) and (3) can be represented as below:

1. Simple
2. +
3. Complex

- A simple sentence has one finite verb (e.g.: stopped) and only one independent clause.
- A compound sentence can have more than one finite verb (e.g.: stood, stopped) and more than one independent clause.
- A complex sentence can have more than one finite verb (e.g.: stood, stopped) but only one independent clause.

Note: In the third sentence, as he stood at the foot of the stairs is a dependent clause, for it cannot stand on its own as a sentence.
Compound Sentence

Read the following sentences. Some words are underlined.

- The Devil laughs but God is dumb.
- They are simple men, and they must have their relaxation.
- These sailors misbehave, for they are drunk.
- Santa Maria shall turn her helm towards Spain, or (else) we are not men.
- Columbus was full of hope, (and) so was Pepe.
- The crew was angry, (and) yet Columbus remained calm.

Note how the underlined words join the independent clauses (sentences) to make a compound sentence in each example. They are called co-ordinating conjunctions.

Task - 1:
Some sentences are given in columns A and C. Some co-ordinating conjunctions are given in column B. Match and combine them to form compound sentences.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>A</th>
<th>B</th>
<th>C</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Pepe stood at the stairs</td>
<td>for</td>
<td>his crew would have turned violent.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They were singing</td>
<td>or else</td>
<td>God is our guide.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pepe was still a boy</td>
<td>and</td>
<td>the men could not go up.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Columbus was an able leader</td>
<td>but</td>
<td>they were dancing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We will reach the shore</td>
<td>(and) so</td>
<td>he was bold.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Complex Sentence

Read the following sentences. Some words are underlined.

- Although Pepe was a boy, he was very useful to Columbus.
- Columbus was furious when he heard the song.
- They sailed until they reached the island.
- We sail because it is God’s will.
- I hope that we are not entertaining mutinous thoughts.
- This is the vision which God has given me.
- We are men if you reason with us.

Look at the first sentence. It has two clauses.

Pepe was a boy — He (Pepe) was very useful to Columbus.

The word ‘Although’ is added to the first clause, reading; “Although Pepe was a boy.” Now this does not make complete meaning. So, it is a dependent clause. The clause, ‘He (Pepe) was very useful to Columbus’ can stand on its own, and so, it is an independent clause. So, the given sentence has two parts. Although Pepe was a boy —— dependent clause He (Pepe) was very useful to Columbus——— independent clause. The entire sentence is a complex sentence. ‘Although’ is a subordinate conjunction.

Task: 2  Analyse the remaining sentences given above.

Task: 3

Frame complex sentences using the subordinate conjunctions given in the box. One example is given.

| though, while, as long as, since, where, unless, in order that, as if, that, whenever |

e.g., Whenever he comes to Dharwad, he meets me.

Make reference

Task - 1 : Look at the entry of a reference to source:

From the above entry we get the information as follows:

1. Name of the Writer : John Macalister
2. Title of the Book : The Golden Gate
3. Edition : 4th
4. Place of Publication : New York
5. Name of the Publishing Company : John Horton & Co.,
6. Year of Publication : 1914
7. Where we find the required information : Chapter III, Page 312

Task - 2 : Write at least three examples of references on the model given above.

Ballad of the Tempest
(for memorization)

- James T. Fields

Read the poem

(Fortune favours the brave is an oft quoted statement. Even Columbus had a lot of faith in the Almighty. But is it true of everybody? Now, listen to a poem where the sailors face a great peril. See whether someone will come to their rescue or not. Read the poem.)

We were crowded in the cabin,
Not a soul would dare to sleep,—
It was midnight on the waters,
And a storm was on the deep. 4

’Tis a fearful thing in winter
To be shattered by the blast,
And to hear the rattling trumpet
Thunder, “Cut away the mast!” 8 ballad (ˈbæləd): a narrative composition in rhythmic verse suitable for singing. tempest: a violent storm, cabin: a private room on a ship or boat, shatter: to break apart, rattle: to make a rapid succession of short sharp noises

So we shuddered there in silence,—
For the stoutest held his breath,
While the hungry sea was roaring
And the breakers talked with death.

As thus we sat in darkness
Each one busy with his prayers,
“We are lost!” the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand,
“Isn’t God upon the ocean,
Just the same as on the land?”

Then we kissed the little maiden,
And we spake in better cheer,
And we anchored safe in harbour
When the morn was shining clear

The Three Voices

- Robert William Service

The waves have a story to tell me,
As I lie on the lonely beach;
Chanting aloft in the pine-tops,
The wind has a lesson to teach;
But the stars sing an anthem of glory
I cannot put into speech.

The waves tell of ocean spaces,
Of hearts that are wild and brave,
Of populous city places,
Of desolate shores they leave,
Of men who sally in quest of gold
To sink in an ocean grave.

The wind is a mighty roamer;
He bids me keep me free,
Clean from the taint of the gold-lust,
Hardy and pure as he;
Cling with my love to nature,
As a child to the mother-knee.

But the stars throng out in their glory,
And they sing of the God in man;
They sing of the Mighty Master,
Of the loom his fingers span,
Where a star or a soul is a part of the whole,
And weft in the wondrous plan.

Here by the camp-fire’s flicker,
Deep in my blanket curled,
I long for the peace of the pine-gloom,
When the scroll of the Lord is unfurled,
And the wind and the wave are silent,
And world is singing to world.

Lakshmi : Gowri, why didn’t you come to school yesterday?
Gowri : I had to attend to my brother Gopal, who is hospitalised.
Lakshmi : Really? What’s wrong with him?
Gowri : He met with an accident, last Saturday.
Lakshmi : My God! How did it happen? Is he seriously injured?
Gowri : He was walking along a narrow bridge without railings. He just slipped and fell into the river and his head hit a rock. He has multiple fractures. But we’re lucky that he is out of danger.
Lakshmi : That’s good. So he’ll be fit soon to attend school, I hope.
Gowri : No, no Lakshmi. He has lost his sense of hearing. I’m afraid he will be deaf for the rest of his life; he’ll be a burden on others.

You have read this conversation. Do you agree with Gowri that Gopal will be useless and remain a burden on others?

Now read about a boy who lost his sense of hearing, and see what happened later.

Colours of Silence

- National Book Trust of India

1. “Satish! Why didn’t you come to school today?”

2. Surender had to repeat the question three times before Satish heard him. He was lying on the bed, his eyes closed. Sweat glistened on his brows.

3. “No. I am not well,” replied Satish. Of late, he had been down with something or the other.
4. “Why, what’s the matter with you, Satish?” his friend asked with concern. He put his hand on his forehead to feel it.

5. “I don’t know Surender. It’s been pretty bad since the last operation on my leg. I get these terrible headaches and then feel as if everything is going dark and silent. I feel miserable. But why are you speaking so softly? I can barely hear you.”

6. Surender gave him a strange look. He had certainly not been speaking softly! ‘Has he lost his hearing?’ wondered Surender.

7. Poor Satish! He had been ill ever since he came back from the holiday in Kashmir the previous year.

8. There had been an accident when he went hiking with his father and brother Inder. They were crossing a rickety bridge over some rapids. The boys stood and looked down at the swirling water below them. “Look, how the water is rushing at that spot!” Satish pointed out to his brother. Just then his foot slipped and losing his balance, he fell into the rapids. His screams were lost in the rushing sound of the water. When he regained consciousness, his legs were in a plaster cast and his head hurt badly. He was bruised and aching all over.

9. Though his legs healed, they remained weak, requiring several operations on them. Worse, he suffered frequently from bouts of fever and infections, especially of the ear.

10. Seeing that Satish was in pain, Surender now got up to go. “Will you come to school tomorrow?” he asked.

11. Satish shook his head.

12. A slow tear trickled down his cheek after Surender left. It felt as if some huge weight was pressing upon his head making everything seem far away and silent. He felt helpless and upset at being confined to bed as he was. The silence was the worst. Everything seemed like scenes from some pantomime show. He wanted to scream to break the silence, but didn’t. For the eight-year-old boy, this was terrible. The doctors didn’t know the cause, except that it was caused by medicines given to treat his legs.

13. Due to his frequent absence and his hearing problem, the school he was attending till then, informed his father Mr. Avtar Narain, that they couldn’t keep Satish. “We will have to look for a new school,” his father said.

14. Satish shook his head saying, “No”. He didn’t want to go to a school where he couldn’t talk to the other children, where everyone would make fun of his deafness.

15. “Beta, you have to go to school and learn. What will you do in life if you don’t get education, eh?” he asked his son. Satish heard snatches of his words but knew what he was saying. After a lot of persuasion, he finally agreed to go along to the new school.

16. But this school didn’t want him for the same reason. “This is a school for normal boys. Why don’t you take your son to the school for deaf and dumb children?” asked the headmaster of the school, bluntly. Avtar Narain was angered.

17. “My son is not dumb, sir! His hearing is a little bad. He is under treatment and will soon be fine!” he argued, but in vain. Other schools had the same to say. In despair, father and son returned home.

18. Though Avtar Narain felt shattered, he wouldn’t give up hope. After the unsuccessful expedition to the schools, Satish became very moody. He couldn’t talk freely with anyone because he was unable to hear a single word. His brother Inder sat for hours with him and talked to him, teaching him words and pronunciation. Unable to bear the taunts and teasing of the children in the neighbourhood, Satish even avoided going out to play.

19. His father and Inder spent time with him every day, talking to him, trying to teach him things. “If you want to get on in life, you have to read a lot. You can learn a great deal of things just by reading,” his father told Satish, giving him an armful of books. Satish leafed through them “The Life of Garibaldi” translated into Urdu by Lala Lajpat Rai, the works of Munshi Premchand, Sarat Chandra and several others.

20. It was as if a whole world opened out for him. Satish became a voracious reader. The books however, were all serious works meant for older children and sometimes even for adults. They made him feel depressed and left a deep impression upon his sensitive mind. He came to know of another world through them, a world of suffering and anguish. He brooded long and hard about why there was so much suffering in the world while his own world looked comfortable in comparison.

21. Another bout of fever struck and Satish was confined to bed. All he could do was sit and stare out of the window or read. He felt lonely and full of despair at his plight.

22. One day, when he was looking gloomily into the far corner of the garden, he saw a bird that was unlike any he had ever seen before. It had a longish tail and a black crest. But the most interesting thing about the bird was its restless energy. Its eyes kept darting here and there, its whole body ready for flight any moment. For a long time he stared at the beautiful bird. When it flew away after a glance in his direction, Satish jumped down from his bed and took out his notebook and pencil. He sketched the bird from memory with a few deft strokes. He liked the picture and set it against the stack of books on his bedside table.

23. He had discovered another pastime which he could indulge in, sitting on his bed. He began filling pages and pages with doodles. His strokes varied with his moods—angry, soothing and humorous. He had always been good at Urdu calligraphy and so, sketching came naturally to him.

24. However, his father was not amused. He took away all the notebooks he had drawn on. “This is an idle pastime. You would do better to read and get some knowledge,” he said to his son.

25. Satish sulked, but refused to stop drawing. “Why do you take away his source of entertainment?” asked his mother one day.

26. “Oh, that! I don’t want him to start thinking that he can make a living out of drawing. Artists make a pittance and live in poverty. It is no career for a bright boy. He has to study if he has to make something out of his life. Besides, his hearing may return any time. When it does, he must be prepared to go back to school, mustn’t he?” he asked.

27. “It has been more than three years since he became ill, how do you possibly think that he can recover his hearing?” asked his mother. She felt hopeless about her son’s condition. But Satish’s father wasn’t about to lose hope.

28. “Why decide that he is going to remain deaf all his life? We must always be optimistic about his chances of recovering,” he gently chided his wife.

29. Several visits to the doctors followed, with nothing improving for Satish. He remained in his silent world, the only solace for him being painting. He managed to paint and draw despite of his father’s opposition. One day, when he was busy mixing the colours on his palette, he became aware of his father standing at the door. He looked up to find him staring at the painting intently. Satish reddened, but continued with his mixing. Slowly his father came into the room and sat next to his son.

30. “You want to do this very badly, don’t you?” he asked. Had Satish had the power of hearing, he would have heard the tremor in his father’s voice. As it was, he only read his lips. He didn’t reply. Avtar Narain put his hand on Satish’s shoulder. Satish was unable to believe that his father was not angry with him for painting.

31. Moments later, his father left the room. When he returned a couple of hours later, his arms were full of paints, brushes of all shapes and sizes and several rolls of drawing sheets. He carefully set them down on Satish’s table.

32. “Pitaji……” began Satish slowly. His father nodded his head, a smile breaking at the corners of his mouth. His eyes remained sad, though.

33. “They are for you Satish. I will find out the best school of arts for you. You will learn arts and make your life in your chosen field.” Satish’s eyes filled with tears and he did an uncharacteristic thing—he hugged his father tightly, his heart full of love for his stern father who had at last accepted that his destiny lay in canvas and paint.

34. Within a short time he learnt more than just painting. He learnt about life. It is this boy now popularly known as Satish Gujral.

Task 1: Read the passage given below and answer the questions at the end.

The first baby bomb was dropped on the densely populated industrial town of Hiroshima in Japan on 6th August 1945. The city of Hiroshima was flattened. At least 78,000 people and possibly many thousands more, were killed or fatally injured. As great a number were injured and all their dwellings were damaged or destroyed. The city’s military garrison was wiped out. Only a handful of doctors remained alive, and most hospitals and medical supplies were destroyed. Citizens of neighbouring towns described the burned, living and dead as no longer recognizably human, with their flesh raw and blackened, their hair gone and the features melted on their faces. It was the most shocking sight man had ever witnessed.

2. Where did the incident take place?
3. How do you say that the bomb blast resulted in a great disaster?
4. What had happened to the military garrison?

The Blind Boy
(for memorization)
- Colley Cibber

Listen to the poem (Teacher reads / recites the poem)

Read the poem

O say what is that thing call’d light,
Which I must ne’er enjoy.
What are the blessings of the sight,
O tell your poor blind boy!

You talk of wondrous things you see,
You say the sun shines bright;
I feel him warm, but how can he
Or make it day or night?

My day or night myself I make,
When’ver I sleep or play;
And could I ever keep awake
With me ‘twere always day.

With heavy sighs I often hear
You mourn my hapless woe;
But sure with patience I can bear
A loss I ne’er can know.

Then let not what I cannot have
My cheer of mind destroy:
Whilst thus I sing, I am a king,
Although a poor blind boy.

Joy and Woe are Woven Fine

- William Blake

Joy and woe are woven fine,
A clothing for the soul divine,
Under every grief and pine,
Runs a joy with skin twine.
It is right it should be so,
Man was made for joy and woe
And when this we rightly know, through the world we safely go.

Know about the poet

Colley Cibber (November 6, 1671-December 11, 1757) was an English actor-manager. He wrote 25 plays for his own company Cibber's poetical work was derided in his time, and has been remembered only for being poor. His importance in British theatre history rests on his being one of the first in a long line of actor-managers, on the interest of two of his comedies as documents of evolving early 18th-century taste and ideology, and on the value of his autobiography.

Science and Hope of Survival
- Keilis-Borok

1. If you are so clever, why are you so poor? - Popular expression

   Why is that some of us still decide to become scientists, despite the fact that businessmen, lawyers and doctors enjoy a much higher income?

2. A famous Russian writer L. Tolstoy once wrote that a writer is not merely a person who writes: a writer is a person who cannot live without writing. The same, I believe, is true of a scientist. Science is an exciting adventure where major reward comes from the discovery itself. What you get instead of money is freedom, camaraderie, and independence. The honours and promotions will depend on yourself more than in other occupations. And you will have the overwhelming feeling of uncovering yet another one of nature’s mysteries.

3. An instant understanding, the efficiency of thought and action, and a good feeling that comes when the like-minded people work together (F. Press)

   It was 1960, the height of the cold war. I was in Moscow doing research on the theory of seismic waves - tremors generated by an earthquake. I was absorbed in my problem; I enjoyed the mathematical challenge. I did not give much thought to how it connects with the real life.

4. The summons came from the President of Russian (then Soviet) Academy of Sciences. He had received a message from the Palace of Nations in Geneva, where technical experts from the Soviet Union, United States, and United Kingdom - three powers possessing nuclear weapons - met behind closed doors. The President showed me a letter from Geneva: an American scientist, Frank Press, quoted my work while arguing with Moscow experts. And, to my great surprise, I found myself in Geneva.

5. At that time every man, woman and child on the Earth lived under the threat of annihilation by nuclear weapon. Each superpower had more than enough nuclear bombs to destroy the others in the first strike. But in the 20 minutes it took for the rockets to reach their targets, the other side had plenty of time to launch retaliation strikes ensuring the destruction of their enemies only a few minutes later. This threat of “Mutually Assured Destruction” with ominous acronym “MAD” was for some years the only thin thread protecting all of us from the common fatal fate. Continuing nuclear tests meant development of even stronger bombs, introducing even more imbalance into the global nuclear standoff. The three nuclear powers were willing to come to an agreement, putting a ban on the nuclear weapon test. And hence, the technical experts were summoned to solve the problem that arose.

6. In formal terms, the problem was the following. Suppose that: (i) the nuclear powers had signed agreement to stop the test of the new nuclear weapons, and (ii) one of the participants had violated this agreement and secretly made an underground nuclear explosion. The problem is: how can the other powers detect the violation?

7. It turned out that this problem had a direct connection with the theory of seismic waves. Underground nuclear explosions produced earth tremors very similar to those generated by earthquakes. How could one distinguish the natural tremors from the ones produced by the explosion? Suddenly, my theoretical knowledge had a direct application in the area of survival of the humankind.

8. In the atmosphere of the ongoing Cold War, with political tensions hanging over our heads, scientists and engineers from the opposite sides of the Iron Curtain had to find a solution, which outwardly seemed impossible, given all our differences in cultural background. What saved annihilation: complete destruction, retribution: action against someone who has done something bad to you, ominous: making you feel that something bad is going to happen, acronym: a word made from the first letters of the name of any organisation, e.g. MAD, standoff (n): a situation in which neither side in a battle can gain an advantage, violate: disobey law/go against agreement, survival: a state that continues to live or exist, Iron Curtain: the name for the socio-political border that was believed to exist between Western Europe and the communist countries of Central and Eastern Europe.

us was a clear and obvious distinction. We were all scientists. We were able to work out a common language, based on respect to hard evidence, undisputable ranking by expertise only, and persistent self-criticism. We were working out a solution that eventually allowed politicians to reach one of the most important decisions of their times: Nuclear Test Ban.

9. This episode taught me that as a scientist I have people all over the world who think and interact the way I do. It taught me never to feel lonely abroad. And, above all, it taught me that while there is science, there is hope of survival and well-being for all of us.

10. A common lore is that immersion in science does not go with practical sense. It is true that on occasions a greatest mathematician of our time was so involved in a current problem that he could leave home wearing shoes from two different pairs. However, if you look carefully, you will find another side to this, which makes scientists the most practical people in the world. All new technologies, all new brands of industry from defence to entertainment stem from fundamental research. Among past examples are antibiotics, electronics, biotechnology, synthetic fibres, the green revolution, and genetic forensic diagnosis, to name just a few. And now only the basic research could give us new sources of energy, new mineral deposits, and efficient defence from terrorism; cure from cancer; new forms of transportation. People trained in theoretical physics are headhunted by financial institutions: those trained in frontiers of biological research become founders and directors in the pharmaceutical industry. So, knowledge of basic science will give you a head start in whatever career you choose.

11. It is commonly recognised that the very survival of our civilisation is threatened by natural and man-made disasters. Among them are earthquakes, self-inflicted destruction of megacities, environmental catastrophes, economic and social crisis. Today, a massive release of radioactivity from a nuclear waste disposal, an earthquake in the middle obvious: clear, indisputable: known to be true, persistent: continuing to exist or happen, self-criticism: the act of judging one's own behaviour or character, lore: knowledge or information about a subject, immersion: being absorbed in an activity, fundamental: the most basic or important parts of something, forensic: of scientific method of finding out about a crime, headhunt: an act to find people with right skills or experience for a particular job, self-inflict: to cause pain or problem for oneself.

of a megalopolis, an outburst of mass violence, or any other global disaster, can cause up to a million of casualties, render large part of our world uninhabitable and trigger global economic depression, or a war in a “hot” region. Such dangers keep growing, although trillions of dollars are spent to contain them by all known techniques.

12. The hope and the responsibility for breaking the stalemate rest not only on the money but on intellectual resources. Though the money is more popular, according to the French proverb, “Nobody is satisfied with his wealth, everybody is satisfied with his wisdom.” Only the basic research can create a springboard for developing new disaster preparedness industry.

13. “Ours is the time of contest over issues not completely understood.” (McGeorge Bundy)

Scientific research is an exciting venture into the great unknown and the token of humankind’s survival. It is the scientists with their tools that are up to the challenge and can ensure that we all safely move with the time.

Finally I have to remind you that science is not the beginning and not the end either. However, if humanly used, science is their indispensable guardian and caretaker.

Off to Outer Space Tomorrow Morning
- Norman Nicholson

You can start the Count Down; you can take a last look; You can pass me my helmet from its plastic hook; You can cross out my name from the telephone book- For I’m off to Outer Space tomorrow morning.

There won’t be any calendar, there won’t be any clock; Daylight will be on the switch and winter under lock. I’ll doze when I’m sleepy and wake without a knock- For I’m off to Outer Space tomorrow morning.

I’ll be writing no letters; I’ll be posting no mail. For with nobody to visit me and not a friend in hail, In solit’ry confinement as complete as any gaol I’ll be off to Outer Space tomorrow morning.

When my capsule door is sealed and my space-flight has begun, With the tea cups circling round me like the planets round the Sun, I’ll be centre of my gravity, a universe of one, Setting off to Outer Space tomorrow morning.

doze : sleep, solit’ry : solitary/alone, confinement : imprisonment, gaol : prison, capsule : part of the spacecraft that separates from the main rocket, centre of gravity : weight due to the force of gravity or attraction.
You can watch on television and follow from afar,
Tracking through your telescope my upward shooting star,
But you needn’t think I’ll give a damn for you or what you are
When I am off to Outer Space tomorrow morning.

And when the rockets thrust me on my trans-galactic hop,
With twenty hundred light-years before the first stop,
Then you and every soul on earth can go and blow your top—
For I’m off to Outer Space tomorrow morning.

6. The speaker says, “Tea cups circling round me like the planets round the sun.” Why does it happen only in space and not on the earth?

7. Read stanza 5, and identify the indirect comparison (metaphor) in it.

   Sitting at the edge of the world
   I can hear my heart breaking
   I can see the pieces falling into the void
   I can't stop from screaming
   But nobody's there to hear me
   And nobody's there to see me
   And nobody's there to hold me
   To stop me from losing my mind.

   Memories going round and round
   Isn't there a way out of this hole?
   Images spiralling without a sound
   Somebody please help me, I'm losing my soul.
   Sitting at the edge of the world
   You can't help me but wonder what's it all
   So much suffering, so much misery
   I wish somebody would come and shoot me.

A place where the Sun would shine
A place where my heart could dance.

Introduction:

(The year is 1942 - the time of the Quit India Movement. A teacher in a small town, a follower of Gandhiji, has been arrested. His elder son, eighteen-year-old Mohan, and his college friends, including Suman, believe in a different form of resistance to the British. His younger son, Babu, aged thirteen and daughter Manju, two years younger, are also keen to participate in the struggle against the British.)

   “Coming where?” said Manju. Even as the brother and sister were talking, they heard magical words, ‘They’re coming, they are coming.” The children, like others, rushed out, heedless of the rain. Policemen now appeared all along the road. Some of them walked in front of the students, some by their sides; but the students marched as if the police didn’t exist. They walked in complete silence. There were no slogans, no shouts, just the shuffle of feet, the drip of rain and a low murmur from the watching crowd.

2. Babu and Manju looked eagerly for Mohan. Yes, there he was, dressed in white pyjamas and cream-coloured shirt, with another boy, both holding aloft a picture of the Mahatma.

3. Their arms must have ached holding it up that way for so long, but their faces were expressionless. Now the leaders of the procession-Suman was one of them, they saw in excitement-had reached the barred gates. A police officer – he was the DSP, Mohan told them later–came up to them. There was some conversation between him and the students.

4. The students seemed to be arguing. The rain had lessened now and the police officer took off his hat and ruffled his hair. Once he laughed, showing all his teeth, but the students remained serious. One of them handed him a piece of paper. He took it without glancing at it and nodded. The students turned their backs on him and one of them shouted.
'Mahatma Gandhi Ki Jai'. The others shouted back loudly. And then they briskly marched back the way they had come.

5. ‘Is that all?’ Manju asked in disappointment. ‘What else did you want? A dance? A drama?’ Babu asked scornfully. Nevertheless, he understood her feeling and asked Mohan the same question when he returned home. ‘Why did you go back so quietly? Were you scared of what the police would do?’

6. Mohan seemed immensely pleased with himself. ‘Scared? Not in the least! We had planned it this way. We knew they would stop us at the gate. We knew they expected us to protest and be violent. Oh yes, they wanted us to do that so that they could beat us up and haul us away to jail. But we are not prepared to go to jail—not as yet, anyway. Not until we’ve given them much more trouble. And so we decided we would give them no chance at all. ‘What was the point then?’ Babu asked. While Manju listened earnestly, her chin cupped in her hands. ‘It’s like a declaration of war. We’ve told them—it is war for us and you’re the enemy. You don’t start a war without first declaring your intentions, do you?’

7. ‘Unless you’re Adolf Hitler’, Amma, who had been quietly listening to them, said with a small smile.

‘Right, which we’re not. So that’s how it was’ ‘And what was that paper you gave the policeman?’

‘That was a notice served on the Collector, as representative of His Majesty’s government, asking them to quit India or face the consequences’

8. Suman and another boy turned up after they had finished their dinner that night. The boy staggered in with a large newspaper-covered parcel in his hands. ‘Got it?’ Mohan asked, his voice tense with excitement. ‘Yes. Lot of trouble though. Where shall I take it?’ ‘Here, let me help you, my room. Okay, Amma?’ ‘No, I think the puja room is better. A light there will look more normal.’ ‘Right, as usual, Amma. The puja room, then’. The boy went away after a whispered conversation with Suman. Then Suman, Amma and Mohan went into the small puja room. Babu and Manju stared curiously over their shoulders at the mysterious parcel which turned out to be a cyclostyling machine.

9. ‘Babu’, Mohan said as they settled down to work, ‘sit out in the front room and keep watch. Give us a warning if anyone seems to be stagger: walk or move unsteadily coming to our house. Manju, go to bed. Or else,’ he went on, noticing her crestfallen face, ‘you sit here in the hall and pass on Babu’s warning to us’.

10. Babu sat outside, alert and attentive. He felt a thickening in his throat. It was beginning. And at last he was doing something. What a pity Gopya, Murali and others would never know about perhaps, some day…. He checked himself and kept his eyes and mind on the road outside. It was deserted. In a little while, the nine o’clock siren went off. Babu thought for the first time that day of the war being fought all over the world. And suddenly, coming out of his reverie, he tensed. A man riding a bike got off and stopped right outside their gate. But it was only to light a cigarette, it seemed. Babu could see the match flaring, then the glow in front of the man’s face. The small point of light moved as the man got on his bike and rode away. One more bike, Babu flung himself inside. Manju turned a startled face to him. ‘Someone’s coming in.’

11. There was silence. From inside the Puja room, their faces looked at him blankly, the dim light giving them a peculiar look. Shadows quivered and danced as the wick in the oil lamp flickered and fizzed. Then Amma got up and came out, followed by Mohan. Suman stayed inside and Mohan closed the door of the room. ‘Manju, go to bed. Babu, you too.’

12. There was a knock at the door. Babu rushed to his room, unrolled his bedroll and threw himself on it. A knock again. ‘Who’s there?’ Amma called out. Knock. knock. ‘Mohan, go and see who it is’. Manju, who had got into bed too, noticed that though Amma’s voice was steady, her hands trembled. Mohan came in saying, ‘Amma, it’s Patil, the Sub-Inspector.’ Amma held Manju’s hand in a tight, hurtful clutch, though her voice was still cool and calm. ‘What does he want?’ ‘He wants to talk to you’ ‘To me?’ The hand relaxed. Manju drew her own hand back and rubbed it softly.

13. ‘I haven’t come to trouble you,’ a strange voice said. “Your husband was my friend in school. I’m a friend”. Amma got up quickly and went out. Manju waited a moment and followed her. There was Babu coming out of his room, making a show of having been woken out of a deep sleep, rubbing his eyes, yawning loudly and repeatedly, mumbling in a grumpy voice, ‘Who is it? Who is it?’ But nobody paid him any attention and soon Babu was taking in everything with the greatest curiosity.

14. The man – was he really a police officer? He didn’t look like one in his dingy clothes. He was saying to Amma, ‘Yes we were in school together. Oh, yes, he was far above me. He was a scholar and I was one of the dunces. He always helped me, though. God knows how often I would have been caned but for him.’ ‘Please, Patil Saheb’, Amma said, rather impatiently, ‘tell me why you are here.’ ‘It’s like this’. Suddenly the man was brisk and business like. His glance swept over all of them, taking them all in shrewdly. Certainly this man was no dunce. ‘There’s going to be a search in your house.’ ‘When?’

15. ‘Most probably tonight. I heard the Sahib talking. They were speaking of a cyclostyling machine. It seems you people are making copies of Mahatma’s speech. They say you have people hiding here as well.’

16. ‘Ha!’ Mohan scoffed. ‘But you have the cyclostyling machine!’ ‘No!’ Mohan repeated angrily. ‘You’re wasting time spying on us’. ‘Tell me’. The man ignored Mohan and spoke to Amma. ‘Yes,’ Amma replied simply and Mohan made an angry hissing sound. ‘Where is it?’ ‘Amma you’ve gone….’ ‘Inside.’ Manju’s heart began beating wildly. Why was Amma giving them away? ‘Give it to me. I’ll get it out of the way. You can have it when it’s safe.’ Mohan burst out again. ‘Amma, what are you doing? How can you trust a policeman?’

17. The man touched Mohan on the shoulder. ‘Mohan, you’re still very young. There are many things you don’t understand. I am a policeman, yes, but your father was and still is my friend. And this is my country as much as it is yours. Now give it to me quickly. They may come any moment.’ Amma opened the door of the Puja room and said, ‘Suma!’ Suman emerged, wiping her face with her sari, looking anxiously at them. ‘Come in.’ Amma beckoned to the man. ‘It’s here.’ Suman stared at Amma and the man in bewilderment. Amma smiled at her and said, ‘You’ve got to get away, Suman. Take away all that material Mohan, will you…?

18. Mohan stared at Amma, at Suman and finally at Patil, who stared steadily back at Mohan. And suddenly the two smiled at each other. ‘Okay, Amma’, Mohan said and ducked into the Puja room. He lugged the machine out and gave it to Patil. ‘Do you have a largish bag with you?’ the man asked. ‘Manju.’ Amma began, but Babu had already got

it. ‘That’s fine, that’s fine’, the man said. And then they were gone – Patil, Mohan and Suman. The house seemed unbelievably quiet after the earlier intense activity. ‘Let’s go back to bed’, Amma suggested. Mohan came back shortly. ‘Suman?’ Manju asked him anxiously. ‘She’s all right.’

19. ‘Go to bed, Manju,’ Amma said. ‘Bed! With the police about to come?’ But nevertheless, she did drop off at some time. And came out of her sleep with a jerk to hear a loud knock at the door. It was repeated. Manju sat up in sudden fright. Amma patted her comfortingly. ‘Who is it?’ she asked loudly. ‘Open the door,’ a strange voice ordered. ‘Mohan, see who it is,’ Amma said. It was like going through something all over again. But this time they knew for sure it wasn’t a friend standing out there. No need for Mohan to announce, ‘Amma, It’s the police.’

Answer the following questions:

1. Why had the students been marching? How was it an unusual march?
2. A police officer was seen talking to the student leaders. Can you guess what the officer had been talking to them?

On Top of the World

-Dicky Dolma

Introduction

(Dicky Dolma scaled Mt. Everest in 1993 just when she was 19 and became the youngest woman to do so. Born and brought up in Himachal Pradesh, she made a concerted effort to reach the summit. Come, let us read this saga of adventure which she penned after that event.)

1. I was born and brought up in Palchan, Himachal Pradesh (HP). From the very beginning, I have experienced the hardships of life. I was only 11 when I lost my mother and before I could get used to the person closest to me not being around, I lost my elder brother, too. These experiences have left a profound impact on me. Not many people know that before mountaineering happened to me, I was deeply interested in skiing and that I’ve been a regular at the Nationals since 1989 and still participate.

I have even won various medals at national and international levels.

2. As for taking up the challenge of the lofty mountains, it wasn’t a difficult decision because, from my very childhood, I had been fascinated by the grandeur of the snow-clad peaks of the Himalayas. Beautiful mountain peaks surrounded my home in Palchan. Every morning when I woke up, they were the first things that I saw.

3. That urge to climb those peaks and savour the breathtaking view from the top was the reason that I took to mountaineering with the zeal of an ant. My desire grew all the more when I came to know about the newly-opened mountaineering institute in Manali and the various training courses being conducted there. I was just 16 at that time but, seeing my determination and one-track mind, each one of my friends and family members stood by me and encouraged me to take up the basic mountaineering course at Manali in 1991. It was again my determination and hard work that saw me scoring ‘A’ grades. But more than that, what gave me immense satisfaction was my name being cleared for an all-India expedition to Mount Everest. Seeing my name on the list was like a dream come true. It was the moment I had been waiting for since childhood. For the final selection, however, we made three successful expeditions to different mountains.

4. After the completion of the course, I was assured of a place in the team. I climbed Mt. Everest on May 10, 1993, and became the youngest woman in the world to have achieved the awesome feat of scaling the world’s highest peak. I had just turned 19 and suddenly I had the whole world at my feet, literally.

5. The view from above is something that only an Everester will understand, but perhaps not be able to fully describe. It was much more breathtaking than I could ever have imagined. The entire National and State awards that I have been bestowed with are nothing compared to the experiences of seeing that view.

6. As for mountaineering being a tough sport, frankly, the thought never crossed my mind. May be it was my zeal for the work. Scaling peaks is second nature to me. I was very determined and was willing to go to any lengths to achieve my goal. When it comes to hard work, I have never been scared.

7. As for sincerity and responsibilities, I’m not a shirker. In fact, the early hardships of life had helped me realize that success always follows hard work and dedication. In my quest for the Everest, I used to practice four hours daily.

8. More than the physical or mental problems, my biggest headache was my financial situation. When I was getting ready for the final frontier, my father was bedridden and a lot of money was needed for his treatment. So the family had very little to offer me. We had to take a specific amount with us, which was really big for me. Yet, I never once considered leaving the spot.

9. Besides mountaineering, I love to listen to music, especially old Hindi film songs. I lost my father a year-and-a-half after scaling the Everest. Currently I’m teaching mountaineering at the institute where I learnt

2. How has Dolma described her preparedness for the task of scaling Mount Everest?

II. Answer the following questions:

A Great Martyr ever Cherished

-Edited: Meha Mathur and Tessy Koshy

Introduction:
(We often come to know from the newspaper accounts how our young soldiers aspire to live and die for our country. They are ready to sacrifice everything. Here is a profile of a young soldier who gave up his life at the age of 25. People live and die, but continue to live for ever in the hearts of patriots. Read on to know and cherish the memory of such great souls.)

“The sand, like life, slipped away forever... as he continued to live on”.

1. Enter the Haneef Uddin household and a warm smile will beckon you to step right in. But that’s all the smile can do as it beams from within the confines of a picture frame. A mere memory – painful and brave – the smile belongs to the twenty-five-year-old martyr lieutenant Haneef Uddin. As you take a deep breath and try to avert the pain that comes from knowing of a young life cut short, you will notice a large picture of snowcapped mountain peaks of the Turtuk sector in Kargil, now called Sub-sector Haneef in memory of Haneef Uddin’s bravery.

2. Perhaps Haneef Uddin, or ‘Khalifa’ as his friends called him, knew what he would be able to give to the nation. Which probably explains why Haneef Uddin, who hailed from a family of musicians, chose to join the army. Perhaps Haneef Uddin also knew that life for him was short and so needed to repeatedly remind himself of his mission. One can only surmise from a flash card, found amongst his belongings, which simply said, “We change lives”.

3. Fate had ensured that Haneef Uddin would battle with hardships from a tender age. When he was just eight years old, Haneef lost his father who had been an artist associated with the National School of Drama. Left to take care of three young boys, Haneef’s mother Hema Aziz, a vocal artiste, would often have to leave Haneef and his brothers alone, as she travelled with the performance wing of the Information and Broadcasting Ministry. Recalls Hema Aziz, “I had a touring job and was out very often, and the kids became very responsible, getting up and getting ready for school without my having to tell them... I didn’t have to tell them in so many words but my going to work without excuses gave them the message that one’s duty is the most important thing in life.”

4. While Haneef’s elder brother Nafisuddin went on to become a teacher and was at the JD Tyler School, New Delhi at the time of the tragedy, his younger brother took to composing music on his Casio. Haneef would often team up with him on the drums.

5. An introvert, Haneef began to make friends only by the time he was 14 years of age. He would often go out of his way to help people because that gave him a certain kind of joy. “In fact, this was the quality his seniors recounted when they came to meet me after his death,” explains his mother.

6. And he was able to reach out to all. Hema mentions that a 77 year-old gentleman, who paid a condolence visit to Haneefuddin’s house, recalled how Haneef had approached him with some queries related to Sufism.

7. Haneef was a student of Kerala School in New Delhi and had applied to the army when he was graduating from Shivaji College, New Delhi. Yet, Haneef, didn’t know much about the army. “The only exposure my sons had was through me, as I had often gone to the forward areas on performances for the Armed Forces Entertainment Wing.”

8. However, six months into the Indian Military Academy (IMA) training, the gentle Haneef was a changed man. “During those days he used to write to me about how tough the training was. I particularly remember him telling me that they had to take a ‘Mussourie bath’ at midnight. I suppose it was some kind of cold water bath at midnight,” remembers Hema. Post-training, Haneef joined the 11 Rajputana Rifles and was posted at Jaipur and then at Siachen, just prior to the Kargil war of 1999.

_Casio_: a musical instrument, _introvert_: a person who is interested in his own thoughts, _Sufism_: a religious philosophy that advocates attainment of Godhood through prayer, meditation, simple and strict way of living, _exposure_: (here) experience or knowledge, _Kullu_: a place.
9. Yet, life for Haneef was always ‘ekdam bindas’: He dabbled in art, sketched very well, made beautiful cards out of waste material, read a great deal and loved playing the drums. Which is why the officers at the Raj Rifs (as the army terms the 11 Rajputana Rifles) made him get all his instruments from Delhi and form the music group, now called ‘Haneef’.

10. While there was not enough time to rise up the ranks as he had dreamed, another of Haneef’s wishes did come true when the sub-sector was named after him. As a young officer, Haneef had once told his mother how a post – the Nanasing Post – had been named after a brave soldier.

11. So his bravery does live on in the air of the cold mountains and on the plains. A scholarship now exists in his name and his family has started a school in Kullu under the Haneef Foundation.

12. Despite the pain and loss, Haneef has earned his family a glory that will see them through the years. It is this pride that has made Hema Aziz politely decline the Indian army’s compensation offer of a petrol pump.

   “There are some families whose sole bread earner is gone. They need it more,” says this mother of a martyr.

I. Answer the following questions briefly:

1. The writer speaks of the ‘smile’ that welcomes anyone who enters Haneef’s house. What more do we know about this ‘smile’?

2. What did Haneef choose as his mission? Why did he do so?

3. Life for Haneef in the beginning was never a smooth sail. Why was it so?

4. The absence of mother from home taught the children something. What was that?

5. How does the writer describe the ‘introvert’ Haneef?

6. Haneef was a young man with varied talents and interests. Illustrate this statement drawing support from the text.

Kargil War: The war between India and Pakistan, dabbled in art: to try to draw, though not seriously, in the air of: his bravery was felt by one and all.
II. Answer the following questions:

1. Share your thoughts and impression of Haneef with your classmates.

2. Imagine you had the opportunity of interviewing Haneef. Prepare a suitable questionnaire. Write probable reply from Haneef. Share your views with your group.

   e.g., You may begin like this

   You : Good evening, I’m.....I’m a journalist and I report for ...... Would you mind sharing your experience with our readers please? Here are a few questions. May I.....

   Haneef: Come on. It’s a pleasure talking to you people. I mean reporters. Well. I’m ready...
The Bird of Happiness

Now, here is a folktale which illustrates how one can be happy. Read the text.

The Bird of Happiness

(A Tibetan Folktale)

- Liu Jude

1. In ancient days, there was a very poor area in Tibet which had no rivers or good land, no warmth or fresh flowers, no trees or green grass. The people who lived there suffered from hunger and cold all year round and did not know what happiness was like. Despite this, they still believed that happiness must exist somewhere in the world.

2. The old folk used to say that happiness was a beautiful bird living on a snowy mountain far, far away in the east. Wherever the bird flew, happiness went with it. Every year people went to look for this bird, but not one of them did ever return. The Bird of Happiness was said to be guarded by three old monsters, who could kill a man by simply blowing through their long beards.

3. Once an extremely bright boy called Wangjia was sent to find the Bird of Happiness. On his departure, the girls of the village offered him barley wine; and the mothers, in accordance with Tibetan custom, spread barley grains on his head to wish him a good journey.

4. Wangjia walked eastwards for many days until he saw ahead of him a large mountain, covered with snow that shone like silver. Just at that moment, an old monster with a black beard appeared in his path.

6. “My name is Wangjia, and I have come to look for the Bird of Happiness.”

7. “Ha, ha!” laughed the old monster. “How could a little child like you, no longer than an egg, dare to set foot here? If you want to find the Bird of Happiness, first you must kill Lousang’s mother! Otherwise, you’ll be punished. I don’t need to do anything myself in order to kill a puny little thing like you. I’ll just make you walk nine hundred miles across scree and you’ll be done for.”

puny: small, rage: anger, will be done for: will be dead, ripped apart: pulled apart, departure: leaving, scree: an area of small loose stones, especially on a mountain, sole: the bottom surface of the foot, shreds: thin torn pieces, will I ever make it: will I succeed?
8. Wangjia replied, “I love my own mother, and I’ll never kill another person’s. Do as you please!” The old monster flew into a rage. He immediately began to blow through his beard; and, in the twinkling of an eye, the smooth road became a vast scree. Every stone on it was as sharp as a knife.

9. After the first hundred miles, the soles of Wangjia’s boots were ripped apart by the stones; after the second hundred miles, his feet were cut to pieces; and after the third hundred miles, his hands were torn to shreds.

10. “This is tough going!” he thought to himself. “Will I ever make it? Had I better turn back now? No, never!” He could not bring himself to turn back. He knew that the people at home were waiting for him to bring back happiness.

11. Wangjia lay on the ground and began to crawl forward. His clothes were torn; his knees and shoulders were bruised. Finally, he reached the end of his journey, and there he found another old monster, with a brown beard and a voice like the whistling wind, waiting for him.

12. “If you want to see the Bird of Happiness,” howled the monster, “you must poison old gaffer Silong first. If you won’t do it, I’ll starve you to death!”

crawl: move slowly, old gaffer: old man in charge, defiantly: refusing to obey, rumbling with hunger: feeling very hungry, set off: start, howled: cried like a wolf, boundless: having no limit, silong: a Tibetan whom the first monster hated, old gaffer silong: an enemy of the second monster, not a scrap of food: not a bit of food, bruised: hurt, head swam: felt as if everything was spinning around.
13. Looking him defiantly in the face, Wangjia replied, “You can shout for all you are worth! But I am fond of my own grandpa, and I’ll never kill another man’s!”

14. In a fury the old monster blew through his long beard, and Wangjia’s bread-bag flew into the sky. Before his eyes, the blue mountains and green rivers were turned into a boundless desert with not a scrap of food to be found.

15. Wangjia set off again. After the first hundred miles, his stomach began rumbling with hunger; after the second hundred miles, he was so hungry that his head swam and he began to see stars; after the third hundred miles, he was so hungry that there was a sharp pain in his guts, as if they were being cut by a knife. Anyone who has ever starved knows what he suffered. Wangjia went to a river, drank plenty of cold water and continued on his way. By the time he reached his journey’s end, he was nothing but skin and bone.

16. There, in his path, stood another old monster with a white beard.

17. “What reckless fool has dared to come here?” he thundered.

18. “My name is Wangjia, and I have come here to look for the Bird of Happiness!”

19. “If you want to see the Bird of Happiness, you must bring me Bhima’s eyeballs! If you dare to say no, I’ll gouge out your eyeballs at once!”.

20. Wangjia bowed his head and thought for a while then he answered, “You must be dreaming! No one has the right to destroy a girl’s pretty eyes! I’ll never gouge Bhima’s eyes!”.

21. The old monster screamed with rage. He immediately began to blow through his long beard, and Wangjia’s eyeballs jumped out of their sockets and he became blind.

22. “This must be the last ordeal,” he thought. “I must keep going in the direction of the rising sun. That must be the place where the Bird of Happiness lives.”

23. Groping his way with his hands on the ground, Wangjia crawled another nine hundred miles. He clambered to the peak of a snow-covered mountain, and there he heard the voice of the Bird of Happiness.

24. “My lovely child, have you come here for me?”

25. Overwhelmed with joy, Wangjia replied, “Yes, I have! My people long to see you day and night. Please come back with me!”.

26. The Bird of Happiness caressed Wangjia gently with its wings and sang for him. His eyeballs flew back to their sockets, and now he saw much more brightly than before. All his wounds were healed and he was stronger than ever. The Bird of Happiness offered Wangjia some dried meat and cream cake, and then bore him back to his home village. They landed on a mountain top.

27. “What is it that you want?” asked the Bird of Happiness.

28. Wangjia replied, “We want warmth and happiness, forests and flowers, fields and rivers.”

29. Standing on the mountain top, the Bird of Happiness gave three loud cries. At the first cry, the golden sun broke through the clouds and a warm breeze came down from the sky. At the second cry, stretch upon stretch of forest appeared all over the mountains, mountain peach and other mountain flowers bloomed together and thrushes and larks led a chorus of birdsong. At the third cry, green rivers and fields came into view and little white rabbits danced merrily on the grass.

30. From that day on, the people in that poor place never suffered hardships again.

caressned: touched gently with love, to set foot: to enter into some place, mountain peach: mountain fruit, lark: a kind of bird.
Think about the text

1. “Will I ever make it?” Why did Wangjia feel so?

2. What hardships did Wangjia undergo on his way to find the Bird?

3. What changes came over Wangjia as the Bird of Happiness caressed him?

I once took part in a drama. I wanted to tell my co-actor ‘stars were twinkling, dogs were barking, and a thief broke the wall and took away the clock.’ But when I went on stage I said, ‘stars were barking, dogs were twinkling, and the thief broke the clock and took away the wall’. The audience had a great laugh. That day onwards I decided not to go on stage.

During my second month of nursing school, our professor gave us a pop quiz. I was a conscientious student and had breezed through the questions, until I read the last one: “What is the first name of the woman who cleans the school?” Surely, this was some kind of joke.

I had seen the cleaning woman several times. She was tall, dark-haired and in her 50s, but how would I know her name? I handed in my paper, leaving the last question blank. Just before the class ended, one student asked if the last question would count toward our quiz grade.

“Absolutely,” said the professor. “In your careers, you will meet many people. All are significant. They deserve your attention and care, even if all you do is smile and say ‘hello’.”

I’ve never forgotten that lesson. I also learned her name was Dimple.

Suresh arrives at Bengaluru city Railway Station at 6-00 a.m. He intends to go to Chinnaswamy Stadium. He doesn’t like to take either a bus or an auto rickshaw. He decides to go on foot. He walks 10 meters towards south and takes a left turn near Shanthala Silk House. Then he walks down the road, towards east, passes Upparapet Police Station, and again takes a very short left turn and continues his walk towards East on the pavement of Kempegowda road until he reaches a circle near St. Martha’s Hospital. From here he walks towards North in front of Vidhana Soudha. After 5 meters, he walks towards his right and reaches Chinnaswamy Stadium.

Father: That's great! Go ahead. Speak well my dear.

Shreya: What should I speak daddy?

Father: Republic day is actually when we Indians got our Constitution.

Father: It is a set of rules and regulations for all people living in India.

Shreya: Even the prime minister....?

Father: Yes! Everybody.. From the president to pauper.

Shreya: Who wrote these rules?

Shreya: Oh! That's why we celebrate that day as Republic day. Right daddy?

Father: Yes dear. And it is an important national festival.

Once there was a man who was blind. He wished to see the whole world with his own eyes. One day his friends took him to Jesus. They said to Jesus, “Lord, this is our friend and he is blind. Please enable him to see.”

Jesus took the blind man to a quiet place away from the crowd and gently touched his eyes. Jesus asked him, “Can you see now?” But he could only see a few movements. Jesus gently touched his eyes again. Now he could see everything. Flowers, birds, trees, people and all. He shouted in happiness, “Lord, I can see, I can see!” He knelt down before Jesus and thanked him heartily.

A total of five nuclear devices were detonated during Operation Shakti. Measurements confirmed that there was no release of radio-activity.

Discourse markers

Discourse means "pieces of language longer than a sentence". Some words and expressions are used to show how discourse is constructed. They can show the connection between what a speaker is saying and what has already been said or what is going to be said; they can help to make clear the structure of what is being said; they can indicate what speakers think about what they are saying or what others have said. There are a large number of these "discourse markers". Some discourse markers are used mostly in informal speech or writing; others are more common in a formal style.

Note that a discourse marker usually comes at the beginning of a clause.
