Preface

The Textbook Society, Karnataka has been engaged in producing new textbooks according to the principles enshrined in NCF - 2005. Textbooks are prepared in 12 languages; seven of them serve as the media of instruction. From Standard I to IV there is the EVS, Mathematics and V to X there are three core subjects namely Mathematics, Science and Social science.

NCF - 2005 has a number of special features and they are :

- connecting knowledge to life activities
- learning to shift from rote methods
- enriching the curriculum beyond textbooks
- providing learning experiences for the construction of knowledge
- making examinations flexible and integrating them with classroom experiences
- caring concerns within the democratic policy of the country
- making education relevant to the present and future needs.
- softening the subject boundaries-integrated knowledge and the joy of learning
- making the child as the constructor of knowledge

The new books are produced based on three fundamental approaches namely, Constructive approach, Spiral Approach and Integrated approach.

The learner is encouraged to think, engage in activities, master skills and competencies. The materials presented in these books are integrated with values. The new books are not examination oriented in their nature. On the other hand, they help the learner in the all round development of his/her personality, thus help him/her become a healthy member of a healthy society and a productive citizen of this great country, India.

The most important objectives of teaching a language are developing listening, speaking, reading, writing and reference skills. These skills have been given a lot of importance in all the language textbooks. Along with the inculcation of these skills, fundamental grammar, opportunities for learners to appreciate beauty and imbibe universal life values have been integrated in language textbooks. When learners master these competencies, they would stop studying textbooks for the sake of passing examinations. In order to help learners master these competencies, a number of paired and group activities, assignments and project work have been included in the textbooks. It is expected that these activities would help learner master communicative skills. Ultimately, it is expected that students master the art of learning to learn and make use of these competencies in real life.

The Textbook Society remains grateful thanks to the chairpersons, writers, scrutinisers, artists, staff of DIETs and CTEs and the members of the Editorial Board and printers in helping the Textbook Society produce these textbooks. A few works of some writers and poets have been included in these textbooks. The Textbook Society is extremely grateful to them for giving their consent for the inclusion of these pieces in the textbooks.

CHAIPERSON'S NOTE

This new textbook of English course being introduced in the academic year 2013-14, has been designed mainly on the principles and guidelines of National Curriculum Framework of school education - 2005 and also on relevant specifications made in the subsequent document of Karnataka State Textbook Committee.

The Objectives :

The main objective of this course is to enable the students to use English for effective communication, academic improvement and acquisition of linguistic, socio-cultural and strategic competencies.

The Principles:

The book is designed on the following basic principles of language learning, namely,

- Learning language through communication.
- Learning language through use, that is, the ability to read with comprehension, to speak with fluency and effectiveness, and also to use it for study purpose.
- Learning through interaction in pairs and in groups

The textbook has two units

1. Detailed Text
2. Supplementary Reader

1. Detailed Text.

This part of text book has 8 units and each unit has a prose lesson and a poem. The prose lesson and a poem in a Unit are in a way thematically related. The selection of these lessons is made on the values they reflect, and in turn, motivate the learners to imbibe those values in their life.

Text format

Each piece of the prose has the following sections:

- Pre-reading activity
- Main text with paragraph numbered

- Glossary
- Comprehension exercises at different levels.
- Vocabulary exercises

for acquiring finer reading skills like skimming, scanning and interpreting visuals. So, to focus more on acquisition of reading skills, sufficient and varied types of material like visuals, maps, ads and charts are provided in this section.

Grammar

Practically grammar is being taught and tested as if it were the basis of language learning. Of course the accuracy cannot be sacrificed, but this should not be at the risk of ignoring appropriacy and spontaneity. So integrated meaning oriented language exercises are provided to enable the learners to discern the underlying rules of structure on their own, though at a steady rate of progress.

Writing

The skill of writing is the most exacting to achieve. Keeping this in view, writing exercises are rendered easy with a lot of clues and guidance. Repeated attempts have got to be made before the learners come out with the final, polished draft. At the later stages, constructive and creative writing will be practised. Writing includes the ability to refer to Dictionary.

The committee hopes that the learners and teachers make the best use of the textbook. Constructive suggestions are welcome.

The committee is thankful to all the experts, scholars, teachers and students who have contributed to make this venture possible. It places on record the valuable suggestions and guidance offered by Sri G S Mudambadithya, the Co-ordinator of the Textbook committee. The committee thanks the Managing Director and staff of the Textbook Committee for the valuable help offered throughout.

Wishing all the stakeholders of the Textbook a rewarding experience.

About the Revision of Textbooks

Honourable Chief Minister Sri Siddaramaiah who is also the Finance Minister of Karnataka, in his response to the public opinion about the new textbooks from standard I to X, announced, in his 2014-15 budget speech of constituting an expert-committee, to look into the matter. He also spoke of the basic expectations there in, which the textbook experts should follow: “The textbooks should aim at inculcating social equality, moral values, development of personality, scientific temper, critical acumen, secularism and the sense of national commitment”, he said.

Later, for the revision of the textbooks from class I to X, the Department of Education constituted twenty seven committees and passed an order on 24-11-2014. The committees so constituted were subject and class-wise and were in accordance with the standards prescribed. Teachers who are experts in matters of subjects and syllabi were in the committees.

There were already many complaints and analyses about the textbooks. So, a freehand was given in the order dated 24-11-2014 to the responsible committees to examine and review text and even to prepare new text and revise if necessary. Eventually, a new order was passed on 19-9-2015 which also gave freedom even to re-write the textbooks if necessary. In the same order, it was said that the completely revised textbooks could be put to force from 2017-18 instead of 2016-17.

Many self inspired individuals and institutions, listing out the wrong information and mistakes there in the text, had sent them to the Education Minister and to the Textbook Society. They were rectified. Before rectification we had exchanged ideas by arranging debates. Discussions had taken place with Primary and Secondary Education Teachers’ Associations. Questionnaires were administered among teachers to pool up opinions. Separate meetings were held with teachers, subject inspectors and DIET Principals. Analytical opinions had been collected. To the subject experts of science, social science, mathematics and languages, textbooks were sent in advance and later meetings were held for discussions. Women associations and science related organisations were also invited for discussions. Thus, on the basis of inputs received from various sources, the textbooks have been revised where ever necessary.

Another important aspect has to be shared here. We constituted three expert committees. They were constituted to make suggestions after making a comparative study of the texts of science, mathematics and social science subjects of central schools (NCERT), along with state textbooks. Thus, the state text books have been enriched based on the comparative analysis and suggestions made by the experts. The state textbooks have been guarded not to go lower in standards than the textbooks of central schools. Besides, these textbooks have been examined along side with the textbooks of Andhra Pradesh, Kerala, Tamil Nadu and Maharashtra states.

Another clarification has to be given here. Whatever we have done in the committees is only revision, it is not the total preparation of the textbooks. Therefore, the structure of the already prepared textbooks have in no way been affected or distorted. They have only been revised in the background of gender equality, regional representation, national integrity, equality and social harmony. While doing so, the curriculum frames of both central and state have not been transgressed. Besides, the aspirations of the constitution are incorporated carefully. Further, the reviews of the committees were once given to higher expert committees for examination and their opinions have been inculcated into the textbooks.

Finally, we express our grateful thanks to those who strived in all those 27 committees with complete dedication and also to those who served in higher committees. At the same time, we thank all the supervising officers of the Textbook Society, who sincerely worked hard in forming the committees and managed to see the task reach its logical completion. We thank all the members of the staff who co-operated in this venture. Our thanks are also to the subject experts and to the associations who gave valuable suggestions.

LESSON : 1

THE QUEEN BEE

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

The dog is a 'faithful' animal. There are many stories and instances which show faithfulness of dogs. Not only dogs but there are other animals also which are faithful to people. If we are kind to animals and show love towards them, they show their love to us in different ways.

You must have read that some people domesticate even ferocious animals like tigers. Even such animals do not harm if we show love and affection.

Discuss in groups the faithfulness of dogs.

1. Once, three brothers left their city in search of jobs. They all set out together. On the way, they came across an anthill. The elder one was about to pull it down. But the little brother who was a dwarf said, "Let the poor things enjoy themselves. Please don't trouble them."
2. So they moved on and came to a lake where many ducks were swimming about. The two brothers wanted to catch and kill them. But the dwarf said, "Let the poor things enjoy themselves. You shall not kill them."
3. Next, they came to a bee's nest in a hollow tree. The two brothers wanted to light fire under the tree to kill the bees, so that they could get the honey. But the dwarf held them back and said, "Let the pretty insects enjoy themselves. I can't let you burn them."
4. Then the three brothers came to a castle. There they saw horses, people, king, princes, queen and princesses. Everyone was turned into stones. There was not a single man alive. At last they found an old man in one of the rooms of the castle. The old man led them to a beautiful table with delicious food.

5. Next morning, the old man called the three brothers and gave them three tasks. He asked them to try them. If one fails, the other should try to do the task.

6. The first task was to bring the thousand pearls that belonged to the king's daughter. They were in the forest under the moss. The second task was to find the key of the princess' room that was lost in a lake. The third task was to find the youngest of the three daughters of the king who was turned into a marble statue. The old man also warned them that the task should be completed before sunset; otherwise they also would be turned into marble statues.

7. The eldest of the three brothers set out to find the pearls. He could not find all the pearls by sunset. He was turned into a marble stone. The second brother undertook the task but even he could not succeed in his task. Therefore, he too was turned into a stone. At last, it was the dwarf's turn. When he reached the moss, he understood that it was very difficult to get pearls from it. He sat on a stone and cried, as he sat there, the king of ants, whose life he had saved, came to help him with five thousand ants. Within no time they found all the pearls for him. The dwarf thanked the ants and went in search of the key.

8. He reached the lake and saw two ducks whose lives he had saved. He told the ducks about the task. The ducks dived into the water and soon brought up the key from the bottom.

9. The dwarf thanked the ducks and moved further. The third task was too difficult because all three princesses were beautiful and alike; but he was told that the eldest had eaten a sweet made of sugar, the next one some sweet syrup and the youngest, a spoonful of honey before they were turned into marble stones. So, he had to guess who it was that had eaten honey.

10. Then came the queen of the bees, who had been saved by the little dwarf from fire. It tried the lips of all the three, and at last sat upon the lips of the one who had eaten honey. So the dwarf knew who the youngest was. Thus the spell was broken and all who had been turned into stones became alive. The king gave the little princess to the dwarf in marriage. The other two brothers married the first and the second princesses respectively.

POEM

Kindness to Animals

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

One evening, I wanted to go to the market. I stopped an auto and asked the driver to take me to the market. He readily agreed and said, "Madam, on the way, I want to buy a few buns and give them to the dogs. Will you please allow me to do that?"

I agreed. He stopped at a place and whistled. About ten to twelve dogs came running. He fed all the dogs with buns. I was really touched by his act of kindness.

Exchange your ideas about such acts of kindness that you have experienced.

Little children, never give
Pains to things that feel and live!
Let the gentle robin come
For the crumbs you save at home; 4

As his meat you throw along,
He'll repay you with a song.
Never hurt the timid hare
Peeping from her green grassy lair; 8
Let her come and sport and play
On the lawn at close of day.

The little lark goes soaring high
To the bright windows of the sky; 12
Singing as if 'twere always spring,
And fluttering on an untired wing.

Oh! Let him sing his happy song,
Nor do these gentle creatures wrong. 16

LESSON : 2

A GREAT KING WHO YOKED THE PLOUGH

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

In history you have read about many great kings. They have treated their subjects as their own children. They were kind and just to the subjects. They have encouraged and helped them in times of need.

Name any king whom you admire and make a list of the good qualities of him.

Here is a story about a good king. Read and enjoy the story.

1. Raja Bhoj was a great king who ruled over Malwa (part of present day Madhya Pradesh). He was a just and kind king and was always very attentive to the problems of his subjects. He used to disguise himself and move around his kingdom, trying to understand the real situations and took steps to improve the conditions.

2. On one such trip, the king came across a farmer who was ploughing his field, but with a difference. Instead of the two bulls he yoked a bull to one side and his wife to the other! The bull and his wife were pulling the plough with great difficulty and the king was sad seeing their plight.
3. He called out to the farmer, “My dear man, what are you doing? Can you not see that your wife is suffering, yoked as she is with the bull? How can you treat her thus?”
4. The man, who obviously could not recognize the king in his disguise, continued his work. Then he replied, “I do not have the time to stop and explain things to you, but in any case, she is my wife and this is our farm. What I do is no concern of yours!”
5. The king would not give up so easily and went along with the man, asking for an explanation. At last, the man said, “I had two bulls, but one died recently and I have no money to buy another one. If I do not plough the field now, I shall not be able to grow anything and we shall starve this year. I had no choice but yoke my wife to the plough. I would have yoked myself, but she cannot handle the plough by herself. What else can I do?”
6. The king was filled with pity and said, “My dear man, please come along with me and I shall give you a bull. You do not have to pay me any money.”
7. The man replied, “If I leave my work now, the rains might arrive before I plant the seeds. I cannot come with you. If you really want to help me, bring the bull here.”
8. The king did not want to leave while the woman was still yoked to the plough. He was a righteous king and could not bear to see such pain. So he said, “Let your wife go along with my men to my wife and collect the bull. Meanwhile, I shall take her place and plough your field.”
9. The farmer had no answer to this and he agreed. Accordingly, he unyoked his wife and yoked the king to the plough and continued his work.

10. The woman went with the king's companions to the palace, where she met the queen and told her the tale. The queen was as generous and kindhearted as the king and she said, "My dear lady, our bulls are well fed and strong. If you yoke them with your old bull, they will not be able to match their speed and energy. Hence, take two of our bulls so that you can plough your field properly."
11. Thanking the queen for her generosity, the woman returned home with the two bulls and told her husband that the man who had taken her place was none but the king himself!
12. The farmer was shocked at his treatment of the king. He apologized profusely for his behavior and asked the king to pardon him. Raja Bhoj however was happy with the farmer, for he had not turned to bad deeds even in his misfortune. He took his leave and returned to his palace, asking the man to approach him if ever he was in trouble or needed anything.
13. Time passed and soon it was time to harvest the crops. The farmer reaped a wonderful harvest, but what stunned him was that the place which the king had ploughed yielded a harvest of real pearls instead of grains !
14. Being an honest man, he took the pearls to the king and offered it to him, saying, "O Great king, you helped me in my time of need and I have reaped a bountiful harvest. I have come to give you your share of the harvest." Saying this, he handed over the pearls to the king, surprising everyone in the court.
15. The king said, "My dear man, these pearls have grown on your farm and they belong to you. I can not lay any claim on them. So please take them back."
16. The farmer replied, "O king, I have reaped the harvest which I sowed, but these are the fruits of your labour and it would not be proper of me to have them in my possession. Please accept them and use them for the good of others !"

17. The king had no answer to this and he humbly accepted the pearls and rewarded the farmer for his honesty.

POEM

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

Do you always succeed in what you do? If you don't succeed, what do you do?

Pitch your ambition high. Try to get at it. If you achieve your goal, it is good. Otherwise don't get upset. But sometimes we try for the impossible and get into unhappy experiences.

Did you have such situations in life? Recall one such experience and share it with your friends.

One summer's day a Fox was passing through
An orchard; faint he was and hungry, too.
When suddenly his keen eye chanced to fall
Upon a bunch of grapes above the wall.

“Ha ! Just the thing !” he said, “who could resist it ?” 5

He eyed the purple cluster-jumped-and missed it.
“Ahem !” he coughed. “I’ll take more careful aim.”

And sprang again. Results were much the same,
Although his leaps were desperate and high.
At length he paused to wipe a tearful eye, 10
And shrug a shoulder. " I am not so dry,
And lunch is bound to come within the hour....
Besides, he said, " I'm sure those grapes are sour."

The moral is : we somehow want the peach
That always dangles just beyond our reach; 15
Until we learn never to be upset
With what we find too difficult to get.
- Joseph Lauren.

Lesson : 3

SAVE WATER! SAVE THE WORLD!

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

June 5th is an important day. Why is it important ? Find out from your teachers and friends.

1 It was 5th June – World Environment Day. The rally was approaching the Beach football ground after passing through the main streets of the city. Students and people, holding placards and shouting slogans, were entering the ground.

When loudspeakers continued thundering the slogans, they sat on the lawn.

2 John, the president of the District Ecology Club, his friends Arumugam and Malick were on the podium along with the District Collector.

John : Now, I'd like to invite our District Collector to preside over the meeting.

(The gathering cheered. After the invocation (to Goddess) there was welcome address, and then Mr. Malick was invited to speak first.)

Malick : Respected President, dear friends, ladies and gentleman, I would like to speak on the prevalence of water. Water is everywhere.

A woman from the crowd : But it is not in our street tap.

(The whole crowd plunged into laughter.)

Malick : Water is the life-line of Mother Earth. It is the most common thing on earth. It covers 70 percent of the earth's surface. About 97 percent of water is in the oceans. But it is salty and cannot be used for drinking and farming. Only 3 percent of water is fresh. But most of it about 70 percent of the fresh water is frozen in glaciers and ice-caps. About half a percent of fresh water is in (he pauses) Will any one of you tell me where it is?

3. A boy in the front row : It is confined to the Krishna Raja Sagar Dam.

(Again the crowd enjoyed the boy's wit.)

A girl in the School uniform : It is under the ground, as ground water.

Malick : That's correct. All living things - plants, flowers, trees, animals and humans have water in the form of themselves. Our human body has about two - thirds of it in the form of water. There is three - fourths of water in a chicken and four-fifths in a pineapple. The human body requires about 3 litres of water a day. We can live without food for a month. But we cannot live without water for more than 5 to 6 days.

An old

Lady : In that case, we people at the Varuna Street are almost half dead. We are without water for the past three days!

(Meanwhile Arumugam has started addressing the gathering.)

4. Arumugam:Why is this water scarce nowadays? This is because our need for water is becoming greater and greater. The population increases every year. Water is used in large quantities in our homes, fields and factories. Trees are being cut mercilessly. Rainfall has become scanty. Ground water has drained too much. All our open wells and bore wells have become dry. Mother Earth looks sad and dry. She loses her dear ones like palmyra, banyan, neem and tamarind and the ever smiling daisy, lotus and lily. We have to stop cutting down trees, avoid wastage of water and save rain water. Let us save water, especially rain water in a bank, at our door steps – under the earth as ground water. Ground water is our Water Bank.

(The audience were clapping , when the district collector came up to the microphone.)

5. Collector : Ladies and gentlemen, rain water is the only water resource for us. We should have water bank at our doorsteps. Rainwater harvesting is the only means that will serve the purpose, at this hour of our need. Thanks to our Government's efforts, rain water harvesting has become the 'people's movement. Every house is to have a structure for storing rainwater immediately. Rainwater harvesting is nothing but storing rainwater in a sump or well or letting it flow into the earth and thus saving it as ground water. Will you all save every drop of rain water?

The
people : We will.....

Now Nature was lustily cheering her sons and daughters with rain when the National Anthem was being sung.

UP INTO THE CHERRY TREE

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

Have you ever climbed up a tree? How did you feel when you first climbed up a tree? Share your experience with your friends in groups.

Up into the cherry tree
Who should climb but little me?
I held the trunk with both my hands
And looked aboard in foreign lands. 4

I saw the next door garden lie,
Adorned with flowers, before my eye,
And many pleasant places more
That I had never seen before. 8

I saw the dimpling river pass
And be the Sky's blue looking-glass
The dusty roads go up and down
With people tramping in to town. 12

If I could find a higher tree
Farther and farther I should see,
To where the grown-up river slips
Into the sea among the ships, 16

To where the road on either hand
Lead onward into fairy land,
Where all the children dine at five,
And all the playthings come alive. 20

HERCULES AND THE CART-DRIVER

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

Explain what you would do in the following situation.

1. You are coming to school on a bicycle and the tyre gets punctured.
2. You miss the bus when you are coming to school.
3. You have passed tenth standard in first class but you do not have money to continue your studies.

Here is a story where a cart driver is facing a similar situation. Read and enjoy the story.

Scene - 1

(A cart-driver sits weeping and wailing by the wayside. His cart, carrying a big load of bundles, is struck in the mud).

Cart-driver : O, Hercules, god of strength! O, strong one! Please come to my help. Only you can lift my cart out for me. Have pity on a poor man and come!

(He prays, weeps and falls asleep. He wakes up to see his side).

Tall stranger : Is anything the matter?

Cart-driver : See for yourself, good sir. My cart is struck. The back wheels have gone deep down into the mud and my bullocks cannot pull the cart out.

Tall stranger : How long have you been sitting here?

Cart-driver : One, two, three hours? I hardly know. I pray for help, I wait. I fell asleep, I woke up again.

Tall stranger : Is that all ? Nothing more? Haven't you tried to get the cart out?

Cart-driver : What can I do, sir? Since cock-crew I have been on the road. It rained, the road was rough and muddy and it was heavy going all along. How tired I was! How tired my poor bullocks were! But we went on. Then came this very muddy patch. The wheels went down in the mud every time, but still the bullocks pulled on. At last we were struck fast, as you can see. I could do nothing. I sat and prayed.

Tall stranger : The rain may have left a good pool somewhere. Look, now they are free, the bullocks are going off by themselves. They'll find a pool and drink, and munch some grass too from under the trees. Now you and I will lighten the cart. We'll put the bundles under the trees.

(The cart-driver does not like this idea.)

Cart-driver : Take off all these bundles, sir?

Tall stranger : Yes, come along. We must be careful to put them in dry places.

Cart-driver : O sir! Empty the entire load and re-load the cart again?

Tall stranger : Let us save our breath for the work we have to do. It's easier that way!

Scene - 2

(Half an hour later, all the bundles are removed and the cart is empty.)

Tall stranger : Look, the good bullocks are back, just as we are ready for them. They look fresh, don't they? See the drops of water on their flanks. How readily they come to be yoked to the cart again!

(They yoke the bullocks to the cart.)

Cart-driver : (complaining) But we do not look fresh, do we, sir? There is sweat on my body and not cool water!

Tall stranger : You'll feel fresh too, when we've got the cart out and you are sitting in it, driving along.

Cart-driver : That will be a long time yet!

Tall stranger : So it will. But isn't it better to work than to weep?

(He puts his shoulder to the wheel.)

Tall stranger : Now put your shoulder to the wheel and call to your good bullocks to encourage them. Then let us give a strong push!

Cart-driver : Hey! Hey! Pull well, Red! Pull well, Brown!

(They give a great push from behind and the refreshed bullocks pull hard in front.)

Tall stranger : Out it comes and on it goes ! Your bullocks are so pleased, they are going off with the cart!

Cart-driver : (cheerfully) Wait, foolish ones! Wait, good boys!

Tall stranger : Good! Now that's put new heart into you. Let us load up your cart again. Another half-an-hour and you'll be off.

(The Tall stranger and the cart-driver load up the cart together. Half-an-hour passes.)

Tall stranger : That's the last bundle in. Now off you go!

Cart-driver : (happy) The moon is out and a breeze is blowing. The road is now dry. My bullocks will find the way home. I can sit back in my cart and sleep. Oh thank you, thank you, good tall stranger. Please tell me your name, so that I know whom I should thank.

(But the tall stranger disappears before the cart-driver can thank him. He hears a quiet voice saying. 'The gods help those who help themselves')

William Wordsworth (07 April 1770-23 April 1850) was a major romantic poet. He lived in Cumberland near Lake District in Northwestern England. He was the Poet Laureate of Britain from 1843 until his death in 1850. He was close to his sister, Dorothy Wordsworth, who was also a poet. He studied in Cambridge University. Wordsworth, along with Coleridge, launched the Romantic age in English literature with their joint publication of Lyrical Ballads, a collection of romantic poems, in 1798.

The Lucy poem is set in rural England near the Lake District where he spent much of his life. 'She dwelt among the untrodden ways' captures Wordsworth's love for rural England.

LESSON : 5

THE VISIT

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

Think of your grandfather. Make a list of the daily activities he does.

- e.g. 1) He goes for a morning walk.
3)
4)

Do you go out with your grandfather ? Where ? When? Why ? Here is a girl by name Debbie, telling about her unique grandfather. Read and enjoy.

1. Every Saturday, Grandpa and I walk to the nursing home a few blocks away from our house. We go to visit many of the old and sick people who live there because they cannot take care of themselves anymore.

“Whoever visits the sick gives them life,” Grandpa always says.

First we visit Mrs. Sokol. I call her “The Cook.” She likes to talk about the times when she was a well-known cook back in Russia. People would come from miles around, just to taste her famous soup.

2. Next we visit Mr. Meyer. I call him “The Joke Man.” We sit around his coffee table and he would tell us jokes. Some are very funny. Some aren’t and some I don’t get. He laughs at his own jokes, shaking up and down and turning red in the face. Grandpa and I can’t help but laugh along with him, even when the jokes aren’t very funny.

Next door is Mr. Lipman. I call him “The Singer” because he loves to sing for us. Whenever he does, his beautiful voice fills the air, clean and strong and so full of energy that we always sing along with him.

3. We visit Mrs. Kagan, “The Grandmother,” who shows us pictures of her grandchildren. They’re all over the room, in frames, in albums and even taped to the walls.

Mrs. Schrieber’s room is filled with memories, memories that come alive as she tells us stories of her own experiences during the old days. I call her “The Memory Lady.”

Then there’s Mr. Krull, “The Quiet Man.” He doesn’t have very much to say; he just listens when Grandpa or I talk to him. He nods and smiles and tells us to come again next week. That’s what everyone says to Grandpa and me, even the woman in charge behind the desk.

4. Every week we do come again, even in the rain. We walk together to visit our friends: The Cook, The Joke Man, The Singer, The Grandmother, The Memory Lady and The Quiet Man.

One day Grandpa got very sick and had to go to the hospital. The doctors said they didn’t think he would ever get better.

Saturday came and it was time to visit the nursing home. How could I go visiting without Grandpa? Then I remembered what Grandpa once told me: “Nothing should stand in the way of doing a good deed.” So I went alone.

5. Everyone was happy to see me. They were surprised when they didn’t see Grandpa. When I told them that he was sick and in the hospital, they could tell I was sad.

“Everything is in God’s hands,” they told me. “Do your best and God will do the rest.”

The Cook went on to reveal some of her secret ingredients. The Joke Man told me his latest jokes. The Singer sang a song especially for me. The Grandmother showed me more pictures. The Memory Lady shared more of her memories. When I visited The Quiet Man, I asked him lots of questions. When I ran out of questions, I talked about what I had learned in school.

After a while, I said good-bye to everyone, even the woman in charge, behind the desk.

“Thank you for coming,” she said. “May your grandfather have a complete recovery.”

A few days later, Grandpa was still in the hospital. He was not eating, he could not sit up and he could barely speak. I went to the corner of the room so Grandpa wouldn't see me cry. My mother took my place by the bed and held Grandpa's hand. The room was dim and very quiet.

Suddenly the nurse came into the room and said, “You have some visitors.”

“Is this the place with the party?” I heard a familiar voice ask.

6. I looked up. It was The Joke Man. Behind him were, The Cook, The Singer, The Grandmother, The Memory Lady, The Quiet Man and even the woman in charge, behind the desk.

The Cook told Grandpa about all the great food that she would cook well. She had even brought him a hot bowl of homemade soup.

“Soup? What this man needs is a sandwich,” said The Joke Man as he let out his deep, rich laughs.

Everyone laughed at him. Then he told us some new jokes. By the time he was finished, everyone had to use tissues to dry their eyes from laughing so hard.

7. Next, the Grandmother showed Grandpa a get-well card made by two of her granddaughters. On the front of one card was a picture of a clown holding balloons. “Get well soon!” was scribbled in crayon on the inside.

The Singer started singing and we all sang along with him. The Memory Lady told us how Grandpa once came to visit her in a snowstorm, just to bring her some roses for her birthday.

Before I knew it, visiting hours were up. Everyone said a short prayer for Grandpa. Then they said good-bye and told him that they would see him again soon.

8. That evening, Grandpa called the nurse in and said he was hungry. Soon he began to sit up. Finally he was able to get out of his bed. Each day, Grandpa felt better and better, and he grew stronger and stronger. Soon he was able to go home.

The doctors were shocked. They said his recovery was a medical miracle. But I knew the truth: his friends’ visit had made him well.

9. Grandpa is better now. Every Saturday, without fail, we walk together to visit our friends: The Cook, The Joke Man, The Singer, The Grandmother, The Memory Lady, The Quiet Man . . . and the woman in charge, behind the desk.

LESSON - 6

A CLEVER THIEF

PRE-READING ACTIVITY :

Read the questions given below and share your responses with your friends.

- Who is your close friend? What made you so close?
- What kind of friends do you like?
- What do you expect from your friends?
- How do you show your concern to your friend?
- Have you ever been cheated by a friend?
- How did you feel when you were cheated by your friend?

Here is a story of two friends. Let's read and find out what type of friendship they had.

1. Long, long ago, there lived Nagappa and Rajappa, who were close friends. Rajappa was very generous. Nagappa, on the other hand, was a miser. Rajappa, unfortunately, was not blessed with children, so he wished to go on a pilgrimage, for which he had saved two hundred silver coins. He decided to carry a hundred coins to meet the expenses on the way and to keep the other hundred coins safe somewhere.

2. Could he entrust the money with somebody? He sought his friend's advice. "No, don't ask me to keep it for you," said Nagappa. "I might spend it and when you come back and ask for it, how will I return it?" He then posed as if he was thinking of a solution. "Well, I have a suggestion. You've seen that huge banyan tree near the temple? You dig a pit beneath the tree and bury the money in it. Keep something to identify the spot, so that when you come back, you can easily dig out the coins."

The next morning, Rajappa and his wife left on their pilgrimage. The previous night, as advised by his friend he had buried the hundred coins beneath the banyan tree. Nagappa impatiently waited till night and then went and dug out the coins. Before long, his wife was going about wearing new ornaments.

3. After some days, Rajappa and his wife returned from their pilgrimage. After dusk, he went to the banyan tree and dug where he had placed some stones in a pattern. The stones were there, but not the hundred silver coins! He dug at other places below the tree; he could not find the coins anywhere. No doubt, someone had cleverly removed the coins from where he had kept them. Who else would have taken them than Nagappa? He concluded. However, he did not question Nagappa, but went and reported the matter to the village chief. "Rajappa, do as I tell you." And he gave some instructions to Rajappa.

4. Accordingly, he went to Nagappa. "How are you, my friend? Is everybody in your family all right? I've been waiting to meet you from the moment I came back. I missed you very much all these days."

"Oh, we're all right," replied Nagappa. How're you, Rajappa? How was your trip?"

"Everything went all right at every place we visited," said Rajappa and he added coolly, "Fortune seems to have favoured me all through and I've come to possess nearly a thousand coins. And I'm wondering where I shall keep them safe. If you'll so advise, I shall bury them beneath the banyan tree. What do you say? But you must come along with me and show me a good spot."

"Of course, I shall go with you," agreed Nagappa. "When do you want to go?"

"We shall go there after dusk," said Rajappa. "In fact, I feel like going on another pilgrimage soon."

5. Somehow, Nagappa's heart was beating fast during their meeting. Would Rajappa have already gone and checked whether his hundred coins were safe? Would he have found out that they were missing from the pit? And when he missed the coins, would Rajappa have suspected him? He thought he would take his wife's advice.

Nagamani was the least perturbed. In fact, she had a ready solution to the problem. "We shall remove those thousand coins also!" she said. "You take my ornaments to the pawnbroker. They can fetch us four thousand coins, but take only a hundred and bury them at the same place from where you had taken them. So, when you both go there, the coins would be in the pit, and your friend will feel confident and place the thousand coins also in the same pit. And after he goes away on a pilgrimage again, you can take all the one thousand coins."

6. Nagappa liked his wife's suggestion. He pawned her ornaments for a hundred coins. He waited for dusk to set in to go to the banyan tree and bury the coins. He then hurried back home. Rajappa had expected that something like this might happen, and so was keeping a careful watch near the banyan tree. He was thus witness to Nagappa's movements. The moment he went away, Rajappa retrieved the hundred coins and went home.

The next day and the next, Nagappa waited for Rajappa to go to the banyan tree. But he did not turn up. Nagappa was impatient. He himself went to Rajappa. “Why didn’t you come to bury the coins? It’s not advisable to keep so much money in the house.”

7. “You know what happened?” said Rajappa casually. “The Village Chief wanted a loan and I gave the money to him. After all, till I go again, I can manage with the hundred coins that I had buried beneath the banyan tree. When I get back the money from the Village Chief, we shall go to bury them.”

Nagappa almost swooned. He somehow or other managed to reach home to tell his wife what he heard from Rajappa. “Oh! What will happen to my ornaments now!!” she wailed.

But after they have worked for me,

As well as breakfast, lunch and tea,
For they are hungry men. 12

But different folk have different views;

She keeps ten million serving-men,
Who get no rest at all ! 14

THE LITTLE GIRL WHO DARED TO WISH

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow :

A boy of ten was to cross the road. He stood on the footpath for a long time. Later, as there was no sound of any vehicle, he decided to cross the road. He was moving very slowly across the road. A group of students rode their bicycles silently towards the boy. They suddenly applied brakes and rang the bell violently. The boy trembled and collapsed. The boys giggled and rode away laughing loudly.

- Why do you think the boy was afraid of crossing the road?

Now, read the story given below to find what Amy did in one such situation.

1. ___As Amy Hagadorn rounded the corner across the hall from her classroom, she collided with a tall boy from the fifth grade running in the opposite direction.

“Watch it, squirt,” the boy yelled as he dodged around the little third-grader. Then, with a smirk on his face, the boy took hold of his right leg and mimicked the way Amy limped when she walked.

2. Amy closed her eyes. “Ignore him”, she told herself as she headed for her classroom.

But at the end of the day, Amy was still thinking about the tall boy’s mean teasing. It wasn’t as if he were the only one. It seemed that ever since Amy started the third grade, someone teased her every single day. Kids teased her about her speech or her limping. Amy was tired of it. Sometimes, even in the classroom full of other students, the teasing made her feel all alone.

3. Back home at the dinner table that evening, Amy was quiet. Her mother knew that things were not going well at school. That’s why Patti Hagadorn was happy to have some exciting news to share with her daughter.

“There’s a Christmas wish contest on the radio station,” Amy’s mom announced. “Write a letter to Santa, and you might win a prize. I think someone at this table with blonde curly hair should enter.”

4. Amy giggled. The contest sounded like fun. She started thinking about what she wanted most for Christmas.

A smile took hold of Amy when the idea first came to her. Out came pencil and paper and Amy went to work on her letter.

5. “Dear Santa Claus,” she began.

While Amy worked away at her best printing, the rest of the family tried to guess what she might ask from Santa. Amy’s sister, Jamie and Amy’s mom both thought a three-foot Barbie doll would top Amy’s wish list. Amy’s dad guessed a picture book. But Amy wasn’t ready to reveal her secret Christmas wish just then. Here is Amy’s letter to Santa, just as she wrote it that night:

Dear Santa Claus,

My name is Amy. I am nine year old. I have a problem at school. Can you help me, Santa? Kids laugh at me because of the way I walk and run and talk. I have cerebral palsy. I just want one day where no one laughs at me or makes fun of me.

Love,

Amy

6. At radio station WJLT in Fort Wayne, Indiana, letters poured in for the Christmas wish contest. The workers had fun reading about all the different presents that boys and girls from across the city wanted for Christmas.

When Amy's letter arrived at the radio station, manager Lee Tobin read it carefully. He knew cerebral palsy was a muscle disorder that might confuse the school mates of Amy's who didn't understand her disability. He thought it would be good for the people in Fort Wayne to hear about this special third-grade and her unusual wish. Mr. Tobin called up the local newspaper.

7. The next day, a picture of Amy and her letter to Santa made the front page of the News Sentinel. The story spread quickly. All across the country, newspapers and radio and television stations reported the story of the little girl in Fort Wayne, Indiana, who asked for such a simple yet remarkable Christmas gift- just one day without teasing.

Suddenly the postman was regular at the Hagadorn house. Envelopes of all sizes addressed to Amy arrived daily from children and adults all across the nation. They came filled with holiday greetings and words of encouragement.

8. During that unforgettable Christmas season, over two thousand people from all over the world sent Amy letters of friendship and support. Amy and her family read every single one. Some of the writers had disabilities; some had been teased as children. Each writer had special message for Amy. Through the cards and letters from strangers, Amy glimpsed a world full of people who truly cared about each other. She realized that no amount or form of teasing could ever make her feel lonely again.

Many people thanked Amy for being brave enough to speak up. Others encouraged her to ignore teasing and to carry her head high. Lynn, a sixth-grader from Texas, sent this message:

9. “I would like to be your friend,” she wrote, ‘and if you want to visit me, we could have fun. No one would make fun of us, because if they do, we will not even hear them.”

Amy did get her wish of a special day without teasing at South Wayne Elementary School. Additionally, everyone at school got another bonus. Teachers and students talked together about how bad teasing can make others feel.

10. That year, the Fort Wayne mayor officially proclaimed December 21 as Amy Jo Hagadorn Day throughout the city. The mayor explained that by daring to make such a simple wish, Amy taught a universal lesson.

“Everyone,” said the mayor, “wants and deserves to be treated with respect, dignity and warmth.”

One morning, before the sun was in the sky, Mariyanna took his net and walked toward the stream to go to river Kaveri. It was dark and he could not even see the bridge across the stream. One or two stars were still shining in the sky. So he decided to wait for some time near the boat.

The athletes had come from all over the country
To win gold, silver and bronze.
Many weeks and months of training
All coming down to these games. 4

The blocks were all lined up for those who would use them
The hundred-yard dash was the race to be run.
There were nine resolved athletes in back of the starting line
Poised for the sound of the gun. 8

The signal was given, the pistol fired
And so did the runners all hurrying ahead.
But the smallest among them, stumbled and staggered
And fell on the runway instead. 12

He gave out a cry in frustration and anguish
His dreams and his efforts all wasted in to dust. 14

The eight other runners ran on their heels
The ones who had trained for so long to complete.
One by one they all turned around and went back to him
And brought the young boy to his feet 18

Then all the nine runners joined hands and continued.
The hundred-yard dash now reduced to a walk
And a banner above that said "Special Olympics"
Could not have been more on the mark. 22

That's how the race ended, with nine gold medals
They came to the finish line with beaming faces
Said more than the words ever will. 25

LESSON : 8

KARNA : A TRUTHFUL FRIEND

PRE-READING ACTIVITY

- Make a list of characters you know from Mahabharatha
- Describe an important character from Mahabharatha.
- Tell about the character you like the most from Mahabharatha.
- Karna is one of the great characters of Mahabharatha. Do you know why?

Read the text to find the truthfulness of Karna.

(Lord Krishna had been to meet Dhrtarastra and Duryodhana to convince them to give the share of Pandavas to them. It was an effort to avoid the battle between Pandavas and Kauravs. But it was not a fruitful visit. Thus Krishna came to Kunthidevi to discuss the next course of action.)

1. Lord Krishna came to Kuntidevi's palace. He related to her all that had happened at the court. He said, "Duryodhana has become blind to his own fate. Kauravas will soon be destroyed. I shall consult the Pandavas and prepare them for what can no longer be avoided. Do you have any messages for them?"

2. Kunti spoke sorrowfully, "What advice can I give to Yudhishtira? He will never behave unjustly. Moreover, the Kshthriyas do not believe in charity. They will win what is theirs through personal valour. It is not proper that my sons should not live like mendicants. Pandavas must regain their territories through their might. This is all that I have to say to them." Then Lord Krishna bade farewell to all his friends and taking Karna with him, drove out of the city.

As they were crossing the outskirts of the city, Lord Krishna turned to Karna and said, “Karna, you are intelligent. You have the power to discern things. Though you were born to Kunti as a result of an immaculate conception, the man she married was truly your father. Therefore, you are the eldest son of King Pandu and deserve to rule over the territories of the Pandavas. Both on the maternal as well as on the paternal side, which is descended from the race of the Vrishni, the Pandavas are your closest kinfolk. Come with me, you will be sovereign of all the lands. Yudhishtira will serve you as a vassal lord. Kuntidevi’s heart will be gladdened.

3. Karna replied, “Lord, I know you, mean well. Your love for me prompts you to give me such advice. I know I am Pandu’s son, but Kuntidevi abandoned me at birth and I was set afloat in a casket, while a helpless infant. Athiratha, the charioteer, who rescued me, and his wife Radha have lavished all their affection on me. I know no parents other than those two. They called me Vasusena and married me off to a maiden from their race. Duryodhana has been my friend and has stood by me all these years. He has requested me to engage Arjuna in single combat. I cannot think of betraying his trust. I have no doubt that the Pandavas will ultimately win because you are on their side. If Yudhishtira knows the truth about my birth, he would unhesitatingly yield up his right to all the territories. But even if I had the world in my grasp, I would give it to Duryodhana willingly. Should I say more? I cannot abandon him.”

4. Lord Krishna smiled compassionately at the emotional outburst of Karna.

“So it be then. Now war will surely begin on the day full moon vanishes. Go and tell this to Bhishma and Drona.”

Then Lord Krishna left for Upablavya.

Meanwhile Vidura hastened to Kuntidevi and said, “That which we did not wish for has come to pass. War between the Pandavas and the Kauravas is certain. Lord Krishna’s peace mission has failed.”

5. Kuntidevi was alarmed at the thought that great men like Bhishma and Drona might perish in the ensuing battle. She thought of ways and means to stop the conflict. Finally she decided to prevail upon Karna to drop of the fight because without his support, Duryodhana would not dare oppose the Pandavas.

One day she went to Karna while he was deep in meditation on the banks of the river Ganga.

Karna looked up and saw her standing forlorn before him. Hastily he got up and bowed reverently. Then he said, “Mother, I am glad to see you. Please tell me what you desire.”

6. Kunti replied: “Karna, you know that you are my first son. You side with Duryodhana ignoring the fact that the Pandavas are your own brothers. Kauravas usurped the territories of the Pandavas. Get back the territories from them and you can rule over all the land and sea. You and Arjuna can live in brotherly amity as Krishna and Balarama do. This will solve all the knotty problems.”

7. Karna brooded over her words for long, in silence. Then he spoke heavily, “Mother, it cannot be as you say. You abandoned me in the river as soon as I was born. Though I was born a Kshathriya, fate willed that I should be known to the world as the son of a lowly-born charioteer. Moreover, you did not bother about me all these years. Now you want me to go over to the Pandavas. If on the eve of the battle, I do what you desire, the world will mock at me and call me a traitor. The Kauravas have always regarded me as one of their own. Duryodhana has thrown the gauntlet down before the Pandavas because I stand beside him. I cannot betray that trust. If need be, I’ll give up my life in their cause.”

Kunti wiped her eyes, her head hung.

8. “Mother, I understand your concern,” said Karna again. “Therefore, I promise not to harm the other Pandavas barring Arjuna whom I am under oath to vanquish.”

Hot tears rolled down Kuntidevi’s cheeks. She spoke, falteringly. “Karna, fate is very unkind. Kauravas will surely be destroyed. But I must be satisfied with your promise that you will spare four of the five Pandavas. God bless you.”

Feeling sad over her plight, Karna watched her go back to the palace with unsteady steps.

SUPPLEMENTARY READING

NAPOLEON'S THREE QUESTIONS

1. Napoleon Bonaparte was one of the most brilliant military leaders of Europe. He was born in 1769 on the Mediterranean Island of Corsica and was trained to be a soldier from an early age. He fought many battles and was wounded several times and received many military honours. He used to inspect his troops often. At the time of the inspection of the troops, he used to look at their faces with care. He would often put few questions to the soldiers whose name he thought he had forgotten. But his armies grew so big that his soldiers did not see their General for years.

2. One day when some of the soldiers of Napoleon were having a drink together, one of their friends brought to their table a Swede who wanted to join Napoleon's Grand army. The Swede was very tall, handsome and had strong looking arms and shoulders but he knew no French. But he admired Napoleon so much that he wished to join the French army and fight for him. All the soldiers looked at the Swede who had a friendly face. They soon began to like him.

3. After many years, the officers told the soldiers that Napoleon himself was coming to inspect the troops. They all warned the Swede that Napoleon would probably ask him some questions and usually in the same order. The first question was, "How old are you?" The second was, "How long have you been in the army?" and the third was, "Did you serve in either of my last two campaigns?"

4. Some of the Swede's friends began to teach him the questions and their answers in French. But he couldn't learn all these words. So they decided to teach him only the answers in the proper order. His friends gave him a lot of practice. For many days this practice continued. The Swede was used to walk about, saying to himself, "Twenty -three sir. Three years, sir. Both, sir".

5. On the fixed date of inspection, Napoleon arrived. He stood in front of the motionless lines of soldiers and looked at them with great pride and satisfaction. The Swede was also standing quite still but sometimes his lips moved slightly. He was still practising. Suddenly Napoleon's eyes fell on the tall soldier and at once he realized that he had never seen this soldier before. He stopped in front of him to ask his questions. Unfortunately, this time the great man changed the order of the questions and began with second question.

6. "How many years have you been in my army?" he demanded.

"Twenty -three, sir" said the Swede very clearly. Napoleon was surprised. He again looked at the tall man and asked, "How old are you, then?"

"Three years, sir" said the Swede bravely. This time Napoleon got angry. He declared, "Either you are mad, or I am."

"Both, sir!" cried the Swede proudly.

A NOBLE GIFT

1. Once there lived a rich man in a city in China. He had many servants in his house. Among them was a young girl called Ya-toe. She was younger than the other servants, but she worked as hard as they did. She worked from morning to evening. Every one in the rich man's family liked Ya-toe because she was honest and hardworking.

2. One day Ya-toe found a small coin from the back-yard of the house. It was a small copper coin. It was smaller than a button on her dress. 'This coin cannot be my master's. My master is a rich man and this is an old copper coin,' she thought. Ya-toe rubbed it and made it bright. 'Now it is brighter than before,' she said. 'I will keep it and give it to my mother on a festival day.'

3. One morning a young priest came to the rich man's house. All the members of the house got together. The priest said, "We are putting up a large and majestic statue of Lord Buddha. We are collecting gold and silver for that. You are as rich as a king. We expect a generous gift from you."

All the members of the rich man's family gave gold coins and silver coins and ornaments. The servants also gave something. Of course, their gifts were smaller than the gifts of their master.

4. The priest collected the gifts. He was about to leave. At that time Ya-toe went to him. She showed her small copper coin to him and said, "Sir, I don't have any gold or silver. I have only this copper coin. Please accept my small gift for the statue of Lord Buddha," he said and left the rich man's house. The priest looked at Ya-toe and her gift. "Just a copper coin! It is smaller than your button. I cannot accept a small copper coin for the statue of Lord Buddha," he said and left the rich man's house. Ya-toe's eyes were filled with tears because her gift was rejected.

5. After some time they began to mould the statue. The best artists of the land were engaged for the work. All the gold and silver coins and ornaments collected by the priest were melted. They worked for days and months. They prepared the statue with all their skill.

The head priest came to see the statue. "We wanted to prepare the best statue of the Lord", he said. "And this is not even as beautiful as an ordinary statue. Let's make the statue again."

6. Once again the artists began the work. They worked for many months. They tried their best to make the statue. But this time the statue was uglier than the previous one. The artists were sad. They went to the head priest and said, "We tried our best to prepare a beautiful statue but the result is not satisfactory. What can be the reason? Please guide us."

The head priest thought for some time. Then he called other priests and said, "Brothers, you went to collect the gifts for the statue of the Lord. Did you bring all the gifts given with love? Were you fair to everyone? Did you hurt anyone's feelings?"

7. The young priest came forward. "Your holiness, now I remember. I hurt a girl's feelings. An ordinary copper coin was offered by her. But it was very small and I did not accept it," he said.

8. The head priest said, "Brother, now I understand the problem. Please go and meet the girl. Get her little coin and bring it here."

It is more precious than the other gifts.” The priest at once went to Ya-toe and asked for her small gift. Ya-toe was very happy. She at once gave the coin to him. Ya-toe’s gift was added to the other metals. The statue was moulded again. The head priest came to see the statue. He was pleased. He said, “Now the Lord’s statue is really majestic.” Everyone was happy. Ya-toe’s small coin was near the heart of the Lord.
