The lines which make us visualise the colourful image of the peacock are as follows:

When the poet calls the peacock “a flash of turquoise” the reader’s mind will be filled with the image of a colourful peacock.

The phrase “the slender neck” depicts the rich figure of the peacock and its grace when it poses.

The poet describes the eyes of the peacock as “Those dark glowing eyes violet fringed with golden amber.”

2. What are the cues that signal the presence of the peacock in the vicinity?*Answer:

A loud sharp call, flash of turquoise, a vanishing tail end, a blue shadow, change in the wind direction and awakening of a cat and the way it stretches signal the presence of the peacock in the vicinity.

3. How does the connection drawn between the tail and the eyes add to the descriptive detail of the poem?*Answer:

The pattern present on the peacock’s tail looks like eyes which cannot be blinked. When the tail is contracted, it gives an illusion of blinking numerous eyes at one time. Hence, this adds to the descriptive detail of the poem.

If anyone tries to get a glimpse of the elusive bird, he “might see the peacock turning away as he gathers his tail.” This explanation in the poem portrays the elusive native of the peacock effectively.
