Thailand is located in Southeast Asia. Thailand was called Siam until 1939. It borders Myanmar, Cambodia, Laos and Malaysia by land, and India, Indonesia and Vietnam by sea. The southeastern coast, the southern Gulf of Thailand, and the Andaman coast are the three coasts in Thailand. It is shaped like an elephant's head.

Thailand is a land of forests, grasslands, and wetlands. The total area covered by forests has declined because of excessive logging, clearing for agriculture and poor management.

Logging (noun) – The work or business of cutting down trees for their wood

Grassland (noun) – A large area of open land covered with wild grass

Wetland (noun) - Land or areas (such as marshes or swamps) that are covered often intermittently with shallow water or have soil saturated with moisture

More than 250 varieties of bamboo are found in Thailand. More than 420 species, or kinds, of birds have been seen in the national parks of Thailand, along with dozens of species of mammals. Fossilised remains of plants and animals have been discovered in many areas of Thailand. Most of the animal fossils found are of dinosaurs.

Mammal (noun) – Any animal that gives birth to live young, not eggs, and feeds its young on milk. Cows, humans, and whales are all mammals

Fossil (noun) – The shape of a bone, a shell, or a plant or animal that has been preserved in rock for a very long period

Thai food is famous all over the world. Over the years, Thai people have successfully adapted foreign cooking methods. Instead of serving dishes in courses, a Thai meal is served all at once. The ideal Thai meal is a harmonious blend of the spicy, the subtle, the sweet and sour. A good meal for an average person may consist simply of a soup and rice.

Adapted (verb) – To change your behaviour in order to deal more successfully with a new situation

Thailand is a destination, transit, and source country for migrants. Migrant workers from other Southeast Asian countries with lower wages – primarily Burma and, to a lesser extent, Laos and Cambodia – have been coming to Thailand for decades to work in labour-intensive industries.

Labour (verb) – Someone who works hard using their hands

Migrant (noun) – A person who moves from one place to another in order to find work or better living conditions
