Sri Lanka is an island surrounded by the Indian Ocean. It is an independent and sovereign country. Every six years, the citizens of Sri Lanka elect a new government.

Sovereign (adjective)– Having the highest power or being completely independent

Island (noun) – A piece of land completely surrounded by water

Once upon a time, Sri Lanka was known as Serendib, Taprobane, the Pearl of the Indian Ocean, and Ceylon. Sri Lanka is densely populated. The bulk of the country's people live in the rural areas and rely on agriculture for a living. Rice is the main crop. Tea, rubber, and coconut are among key agricultural crops, with tea earning a significant amount of foreign exchange. Cocoa and spices, including cinnamon, cardamom, nutmeg, pepper and cloves, are other important crops.

Foreign exchange (noun) – The system by which the type of money used in one country is exchanged for another country's money, making international trade easier

Natural vegetation covers more than a third of Sri Lanka's entire land area. Most have been depleted as a result of intensive forest removal for timber harvesting and farming. It is among the world's largest 25 biodiversity hotspots. Despite its small size, Sri Lanka has a wide variety of habitats, including forest, agricultural, aquatic, and coastal regions. To safeguard the country's wildlife, the Sri Lankan government has established several national parks.

Vegetation (noun) – Plant life or total plant cover (as of an area)

Biodiversity (noun) – The existence of a large number of different kinds of animals and plants that make a balanced environment

Ecosystem (noun) – All the plants and living creatures in a particular area considered in relation to their physical environment

Due to its eight UNESCO World Heritage Sites, 1,330 kilometres of coastline, many national parks with abundant wildlife, around 500,000 acres of beautiful tea estates, 250 acres of botanical gardens, 350 waterfalls, and 25,000 water bodies, the country has a lot to offer to tourists.

Off-season (noun) – A period of the year when there is less activity in business
