ACTIVITY 1

Across the Solar System with Mila

Venus is the second planet from the Sun. It is the brightest object in the night sky on Earth, besides the Moon. Through a telescope, you can see Venus go through its phases, just like the Moon. Venus has no moons of its own. It is frequently referred to as Earth's twin because of its similarity to Earth in terms of size and density.

Density (noun) – The amount of space which is taken up by an object or a substance.

Dense (adjective) – Something in which the parts are held very close together with little space between.

Venus is the only planet in our solar system to rotate in a clockwise manner. This means that the Sun rises in the West and sets in the East for an observer on Venus. One year on Venus takes only 225 Earth days as the planet revolves around the Sun at a much faster rate than Earth. But the rotation speed of Venus is so slow that a day on the planet is around 243 days. Which means, a day is longer than a year on Venus!

Venus is the hottest planet in our solar system. Its surface temperature is around 475 degrees Celsius. It is so hot that it can make metals like lead melt. Speaking of a hot planet, Venus has many volcanoes and craters present on its surface. There are also two main highlands, one of which has a mountain range that's taller than Mt. Everest!

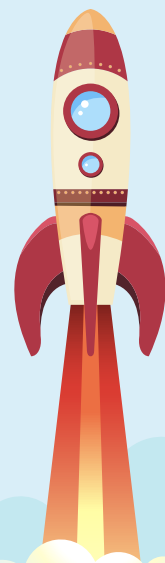

Crater (noun) - The round hole at the top of a volcano, or a hole in the ground

Microbe (noun) - A tiny living thing that is only visible through a microscope and is capable of causing diseases.

Venus was the first planet to be explored by a spacecraft, and is still a planet of interest for us. Only last year, three Venus missions were announced – NASA's VERITAS and DAVINCI, and ESA's EnVision. Even though life, as we know it, seems unlikely on this planet, some scientists believe that microbes may exist in the clouds of Venus.
