ACTIVITY 1

Across the Solar System with Mila

• Uranus

Type:

Ice Giant

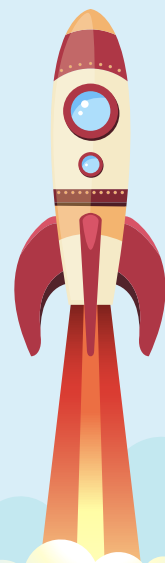

Length of a year: 84 Earth years

Size (diameter): 50,724 km, or about 4 Earths

Uranus is the seventh planet from the Sun. Discovered in 1781 by William Herschel, Uranus gets its name from the Greek god of the sky. As compared to the 8 minutes it takes for sunlight to get from the Sun to Earth, the journey of sunlight from the Sun to Uranus takes 2 hours and 40 minutes. This tells us that Uranus is very far from the Sun.

Uranus is the third-biggest planet in our solar system. It is so big that 64 Earths could fit inside it. What's more surprising is that Uranus rotates on its axis fairly quickly despite its massive size. On Uranus, a day lasts just 17 hours and 14 minutes. The planet takes 84 Earth years to orbit the Sun.

There are 27 known moons orbiting Uranus and 13 rings that encircle the planet. Uranus is unique among the planets in that it rotates on its side. Uranus's atmosphere is sometimes even colder than Neptune's because it can get as cold as -224.2 degrees Celsius. On Uranus, winds may reach speeds of up to 900 kilometres per hour.

Life as we know it cannot exist on Uranus. This planet's environment is too dangerous for the evolution of life.

Only one spacecraft has visited Uranus so far. NASA's Voyager 2 collected most of its important information on Uranus, including its rings and moons, in just six hours after travelling for nine years to reach the planet.
