We all are familiar with the word internet. We can get information with just one click on the Internet, which makes our work easier. It is one of the greatest inventions ever.

Internet was a US military initiative to share information between computers in various locations. ARPANET (Advanced Research Projects Agency Network) started in 1969. Starting in the 1970s, computers all over the USA and the world connected to ARPANET. The original ARPANET later changed into what we now know as the Internet.

Initiative (noun) – A new plan for dealing with a problem or achieving a goal

The Internet works because people around the world have agreed to follow the same rules when sharing and exchanging information. So, no one group is in charge of the Internet. The part of the Internet with websites and webpages is called the “World Wide Web” or “WWW.” The software used to look at the World Wide Web (WWW) is called a web browser.

As the World Wide Web (WWW) became more popular in the late 1990s, more and more internet businesses started. It was called the “dot com boom.” That is why we can now do many things on the Internet, like shopping, playing games, listening to music, etc.

The Internet can be a fun and valuable tool, but it can also be dangerous because of cybercrime. Stealing and other crimes in real life also happen on the Internet. Because of this, you must be careful when using the Internet. You should always ask your parents before going to a new website or if a stranger contacts you online, even if it is to say “Hi.”
